1 INTRODUCTION

2 1. This lawsuit presents a challenge to Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”)
3 Secretary Kristi Noem’s decisions to deprive 600,000 Venezuelans and 500,000 Haitians 4 protected by Temporary Protected Status (“TPS”) of the right to live and work legally in the 5 United States for the eighteen-month periods lawfully authorized by her predecessor. Secretary 6 Noem’s attempt to “vacate” this statutorily authorized humanitarian protection for more than a 7 million people who rely on it for their safety and livelihood is unprecedented and unlawful.

8 2. Secretary Noem took two illegal actions concerning Venezuela’s TPS within one 9 week of assuming her role at the head of DHS. Three days after her confirmation, she “vacated” 10 an extension of TPS protections for Venezuelans residing in the United States, just weeks after the 11 extension was duly published in the Federal Register. Two days later, she terminated TPS for the 12 Venezuelans who initially registered in 2023. These actions have the effect of robbing 600,000 13 Venezuelan TPS holders of the right to live and work in this country for the next eighteen months.
14 Approximately 350,000 Venezuelan TPS holders stand to lose this humanitarian legal status on 15 April 7, 2025, and their work authorization as soon as April 2, 2025. Secretary Noem announced 16 the vacatur decision in an exclusive interview she gave to Fox News, saying that “the people of 17 this country want these dirt bags out.”

18 3. On February 20, 2025—less than a month into her tenure—Secretary Noem 19 announced a third unlawful TPS decision, this time for Haiti, by enacting a “partial vacatur” of the 20 July 1, 2024 extension and redesignation of Haiti for TPS. Under the July 2024 decision, Haitian 21 TPS holders were entitled to protection until February 3, 2026. Secretary Noem cut Haiti’s 22 designation period from eighteen months to twelve months, advancing the end of TPS for eligible 23 Haitian nationals to August 3, 2025.

24 4. Secretary Noem’s action was in keeping with President Donald Trump’s threats and 25 false claims about Haiti. During his campaign, in response to a question about Haitian TPS 26 holders, President Trump asserted he would “revoke” TPS to remove people who were 27 “destroy[ing] our country.” President Trump also repeatedly amplified the false and racist claim 28 that Haitian TPS holders were eating dogs and cats.

1       5. Plaintiffs in this case are the National TPS Alliance (“NTPSA”), a member-led 2 organization representing TPS holders across the country, including individuals from Venezuela 3 and Haiti who have TPS (“Individual Plaintiffs”). These individuals cannot return safely to their 4 country of origin. TPS allows them to live and work lawfully in the United States. They represent 5 the diverse population of Venezuelans and Haitians who have relied on TPS to provide them the 6 most basic forms of human security—a stable place to live and a chance to work for a living 7 during this time of severe crisis in their home countries. They are educators, laborers, health care 8 workers, caretakers, and advocates; parents, students, and children. They live all across the 9 country, with homes, children, families, jobs, and deep community ties. If Secretary Noem’s TPS 10 termination goes into effect, they will be subject to deportation yet unable to return safely to their 11 home countries; and without legal authorization to live or work in the United States.

12       6. The Secretary’s actions are illegal for multiple reasons. At the outset, DHS has no 13 authority to “vacate” a prior TPS extension—in whole or in part. The TPS statute tightly regulates 14 the conditions under which TPS decisions can be made, setting time periods and other procedural 15 rules that must be followed for both extensions and terminations. The agency does not have 16 implicit authority to accomplish the same objectives on whatever timeframe it wants, and without 17 following the requisite procedures.

18       7. Even if DHS did have such authority, the reasons provided by the Secretary to 19 vacate the extension are arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, pretextual, and inexplicably 20 deviate from past practice in violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”). For instance, 21 contrary to the claims made in the Federal Register, there was nothing unusual about either the 22 timing of the now-vacated extension for Venezuela or the justifications provided for the July 2024
23 extension and redesignation of Haiti. Nor did the prior decisions on Venezuela and Haiti’s TPS 24 designations suffer from any of the other purported defects on which Secretary Noem relied to 25 justify her decisions—defects which, in any event, should have been resolved by alternatives short 26 of vacatur.

27       8. The three unlawful orders—the vacatur orders for Venezuela and Haiti, and the 28 termination decision for Venezuela—suffer from additional defects as well. Among others,

1 DHS's decisions rest on the assumption that TPS is itself illegal, and that Venezuelans and 2 Haitians with TPS are in the United States illegally. This error is evident on the face of the 3 decisions. It is also evident from statements made by Secretary Noem. Before she assumed 4 leadership of DHS, she—along with President Trump, Vice President J.D. Vance, and high-level
 5 Trump advisors—made plain their position that TPS was “illegal,” that persons protected by TPS 6 are here “illegally,” and that this justified their plan to terminate TPS. She reiterated that statement 7 in announcing the decision to partially vacate the 2024 Haiti redesignation and extension. But the 8 Secretary’s disdain for TPS and TPS holders cannot nullify a statute.

9. The Secretary’s decisions also were motivated at least in part by racial animus, in 10 contravention of the Fifth Amendment. That is clear from statements the Secretary made when 11 announcing the Venezuela decisions themselves, labeling Venezuelan TPS holders as 12 “dirtbags”—an expression of racism made by the official decisionmaker as part of her explanation 13 for the decision. Making matters worse, that statement is just one among a torrent of similar racist 14 statements that Secretary Noem, President Trump, and members of the Trump campaign and 15 administration have made to attack and marginalize non-white immigrants generally, and the 16 Venezuelan and Haitian TPS communities in particular.

17. For each of these reasons, this Court should set aside the agency’s unlawful vacatur 18 and termination orders, and reinstate the prior extension.

19 JURISDICTION AND VENUE

20. This Court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. 1331 because this action arises under the 21 Constitution and laws of the United States. This Court has additional remedial authority under the 22 Declaratory Judgment Act<sup>1</sup> and the Administrative Procedure Act.<sup>2</sup> Article III and the Fifth 23 Amendment independently grant this Court subject matter jurisdiction over Plaintiffs’ Fifth 24 Amendment claim.

28 <sup>2</sup> 5 U.S.C. 701–706.

1           12. The federal government has waived its sovereign immunity and permitted judicial 2 review of agency action under 5 U.S.C. 702.<sup>3</sup> In addition, sovereign immunity does not bar claims 3 against federal officials seeking to prevent violations of federal law (rather than monetary relief).<sup>4</sup>

4           13. Venue is proper in the Northern District of California under 28 U.S.C. 1331(e)(1) 5 because at least one Plaintiff resides in this judicial district and each Defendant is an agency of the 6 United States or an officer of the United States sued in his or her official capacity.

7           INTRADISTRICT ASSIGNMENT

8           14. Assignment is proper in the San Francisco division because the claims of Plaintiffs 9 that reside in this judicial district arise in Alameda and San Mateo Counties.<sup>5</sup>

10           THE PARTIES

11           Plaintiffs

12           15. Plaintiff National TPS Alliance (NTPSA) is a member-led organization whose 13 mission is to defend the TPS program and win a path to permanent residency for TPS holders.
14 NTPSA is fiscally sponsored by the Central American Resource Center - CARECEN - of 15 California, a non-profit organization headquartered in Los Angeles, California, which has worked 16 for more than four decades to provide immigrant integration programs, deliver immigration legal 17 services, and foster civic participation and community engagement on immigration policy, 18 education reform, and workers' rights.

19           16. NTPSA advocates to defend TPS and win a path to permanent status for TPS
20 holders, organizes actions to raise public awareness about TPS and the contributions TPS holders
21 make to this country, facilitates community and civic engagement by TPS holders, and provides 22 access to timely and accurate TPS-related information and services to its members. Membership in 23 the NTPSA is free and voluntary. Individuals can become NTPSA members either by joining a
24 local NTPSA committee or by submitting an individual membership application. NTPSA's

1 members set the organization's priorities, lead and participate in NTPSA's local committees and 2 working groups, and select and serve on NTPSA's Executive Committee.

3 17. NTPSA brings this action on behalf of its members. The vast majority of NTPSA's
4 members are TPS holders, including TPS holders from Afghanistan, Burma (Myanmar), 5 Cameroon, El Salvador, Haiti, Honduras, Lebanon, Nepal, Nicaragua, Sudan, Ukraine, Venezuela, 6 and Yemen; the rest are family members of TPS holders and other individuals who wish to 7 support the TPS community. The NTPSA has over 130,000 Venezuelan and Haitian TPS holder 8 members living in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. They face irreparable harm from the 9 challenged vacatur and termination.

10 18. Plaintiff Mariela González is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2021
11 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur, is at risk of losing her TPS and work 12 authorization on September 10, 2025. She is a resident of San Mateo County, California, and has 13 lived in the United States for the past fourteen years. Mariela works as an instructional coach with 14 an urban school district. Her mother, father, brother, sister, and nephews all live in the United 15 States and are U.S. citizens. She is an NTPSA member.

16 19. Plaintiff Freddy Jose Arape Rivas is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023
17 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing his TPS
18 on April 7, 2025. He applied to renew his TPS and work authorization on January 17, 2025,
19 pursuant to the now-vacated extension of TPS for Venezuelans. USCIS already automatically 20 extended his employment authorization for up to 540 days in response to his application. But the 21 new Federal Register notice vacating the January 17 extension provides that "USCIS will 22 invalidate EADs" and TPS-related documentation issued pursuant to the January extension. Thus,
23 Freddy's work authorization is at risk of expiring on April 2, 2025. Freddy lives in Collin County, 24 Texas, and works for a technology company. He has family in Texas, including a cousin who,
25 along with his wife and seven-year-old daughter, also have TPS. He is an NTPSA member.

26 20. Plaintiff M.H. is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023 designation and, as a
27 result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing her TPS status on April 7, 28 2025. Her work authorization expires on April 2, 2025. She lives in a Tennessee suburb with her

1 husband and two children. Her seven-year-old daughter also has TPS. Her husband, an engineer, is 2 a U.S. citizen employed by a government subcontractor, and together they have a two-year-old
3 U.S. citizen son. M.H. is a full-time caregiver for her two young children. Her driver's license
4 expires when her TPS does, and she depends on it for her daily needs. She is an NTPSA member.

5       21. Plaintiff Cecilia Daniela González Herrera is a Venezuelan who has TPS under 6 the 2021 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur, is at risk of losing her TPS on 7 September 10, 2025. She lives with her parents and younger brother in Kissimmee, Florida, and is 8 a derivative applicant on her parents' long-pending asylum application. She is a student at the 9 University of Central Florida and expects to graduate with a bachelor's degree in May. She is also 10 employed as the Voting Rights Advocacy Coordinator for Latino Justice PRLDEF. She is an 11 NTPSA member.

12       22. Plaintiff Alba Cecilia Purica Hernández is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 13 2023 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing her
14 work authorization on April 2, 2025 and TPS on April 7, 2025. She had been a university student 15 in Venezuela. She lives in San Leandro, California and works as a childcare provider. She is an 16 NTPSA member.

17       23. Plaintiff E.R. is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023 designation and is at 18 risk of losing her TPS on April 7, 2025 and her work authorization on April 2, 2025. She is a 19 single parent to a twelve-year-old daughter, who is also a TPS holder. She lives in New York, 20 where she works in a factory. She relies on TPS for her work authorization and legal status. She is 21 an NTPSA member.

22       24. Plaintiff Hendrina Vivas Castillo is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023
23 designation, and, as a result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing her TPS
24 on April 7, 2025. Her work permit expires on April 2, 2025. She lives in Culver City, California
25 and works as a delivery driver. She is an NTPSA member.

26       25. Plaintiff A.C.A. is a Haitian TPS holder living in Miami, Florida who has TPS 27 pursuant to the 2021 designation of Haiti. A.C.A. has lived in the United States since he was 28 fifteen years old; he is now thirty. His mother and brothers are U.S. citizens or lawful permanent

1 residents. A.C.A. works in healthcare administration and attends college, where he studies
2 accounting on a full scholarship. Without TPS, A.C.A. would be left without work authorization, 3 protection against deportation, or the ability to attend college, where he relies on TPS for in-state 4 tuition. A.C.A. is an NTPSA member.

5       26. Plaintiff Sherika Blanc is a Haitian TPS holder living in Kentucky who has TPS 6 under the 2010 designation of Haiti for TPS. She is the mother of four U.S. citizen children and is 7 married to a U.S. citizen spouse. Sherika is 34 years old and has lived in the United States since 8 she was eight. She is a certified nursing assistant and works as a medical coordinator. She also 9 owns her own nail salon. She relies on TPS for legal status and work authorization. Sherika was a 10 plaintiff in Ramos v. Nielsen, Case No. 3:18-cv-1554 (EMC), and is an NTPSA member.

11       27. Plaintiff Viles Dorsainvil is a Haitian TPS holder living in Springfield, Ohio, who 12 has TPS under the 2021 designation of Haiti for TPS. He is a former pastor and the director of the 13 Haitian Community Help & Support Center, a nonprofit founded to assist the Haitian immigrant 14 community in Springfield. Viles has emerged as a national leader for the Haitian community, 15 speaking out against the targeted and repeated attacks by President Trump and Vice President 16 Vance against Haitian TPS holders in Springfield during the 2024 presidential campaign. Viles 17 relies on TPS for work authorization and protection against deportation. He is an NTPSA member.

18       28. Plaintiff G.S. is a Haitian who has TPS under the 2024 designation of Haiti for TPS.
19 He is a 30-year-old medical doctor trained in Haiti who hopes to someday become licensed to 20 practice medicine in the United States. Currently, he works as a case manager for the State of 21 Massachusetts, assisting low-income residents in securing housing. G.S., fluent in English, Creole, 22 and French and proficient in Spanish, works with many immigrants and utilizes his language skills 23 to assist his clients. He relies on TPS for his legal status. He is an NTPSA member.

24 Defendants

25       29. Defendant Kristi Noem, sued in her official capacity, is the Secretary of Homeland 26 Security. As the highest-ranking officer for DHS, Defendant Noem has ultimate statutory authority over all TPS extension, termination, and designation decisions.<sup>6</sup>

30. Defendant U.S. Department of Homeland Security is a cabinet-level department of the Executive Branch of the federal government and is an “agency” within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. 551(1). DHS includes various component agencies, including the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (“USCIS”). DHS, together with all of its component agencies, is responsible for administering and enforcing the TPS program.

31. Defendant United States of America includes all other government agencies and departments responsible for the implementation, administration, and change in policy concerning the TPS program.

STATUTORY FRAMEWORK

32. Congress established the Temporary Protected Status program in the Immigration Act of 1990.<sup>7</sup> TPS is a form of humanitarian relief, providing lawful immigration status to eligible foreign nationals who cannot safely return home to war-torn or disaster-stricken countries. By enacting the TPS statute, which is codified at 8 U.S.C. 1254a, Congress established formal criteria for relief and set forth predictable procedures.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Before Congress created TPS, the Executive Branch previously used ad hoc enforcement mechanisms to allow individuals to remain in the United States for humanitarian reasons. See Adam B. Cox & Cristina M. Rodríguez, The President and Immigration Law, 119 Yale L.J. 458, 501–03 (2009) (discussing use of the “parole power,” which is currently codified at 8 U.S.C. 1182(d)(5)); Lynda J. Oswald, Extended Voluntary Departure: Limiting the Attorney General’s Discretion in Immigration Matters, 85 Mich. L. Rev. 152 (1986) (discussing use of “Extended Voluntary Departure”). Presidents have continued to employ such programs even after the creation of TPS. For example, President Trump exercised his discretion to designate Venezuela for “Deferred Enforced Departure” in 2020. Somewhat like TPS, deferred enforced departure allows foreign nationals to remain and work in the United States lawfully while conditions in their homeland are unsafe or return is impracticable.

2 decision for a given country.<sup>10</sup> After consulting with “appropriate” government agencies, the 3 Secretary may designate a foreign state, or any part of that state, for TPS based on: (A) an 4 “ongoing armed conflict within the state” that would “pose a serious threat” to the “personal
5 safety” of the foreign nationals of that state; (B) an “earthquake, flood, drought, epidemic, or other 6 environmental disaster in the state resulting in a substantial, but temporary, disruption of living 7 conditions,” which makes the foreign state “unable, temporarily, to handle adequately the return to 8 the state” of its nationals, and where the foreign state has “officially” requested a designation; or 9 (C) the existence of “extraordinary and temporary conditions in the foreign state” that prevent 10 foreign nationals from safely returning, and where the temporary presence of those foreign 11 nationals in the United States is not “contrary to the national interest of the United States.”<sup>11</sup>

12       34. An initial designation period for a given country lasts for six, twelve, or eighteen
13 months, at the Secretary’s discretion.<sup>12</sup> Before the designation can become effective, the Secretary
14 must publish a notice in the Federal Register that includes, among other things, a statement of 15 findings, the effective date of the designation, and a tally of eligible foreign nationals.<sup>13</sup> Once the 16 designation is ordered, it “shall remain in effect” for a period “of not less than 6 months,” and 17 remains operative until terminated under procedures specified in the statute.<sup>14</sup>

20 Department of Justice to the Department of Homeland Security “shall be deemed to refer to the Secretary” of Homeland Security. See 6 U.S.C. 557.

21       <sup>10</sup> The agency has long recognized authority to designate a country more than once, which is 22 called “redesignation.” See Extension of Designation and Redesignation of Liberia Under 23 Temporary Protected Status Program, 62 Fed. Reg. 16608, 16609 (Apr. 7, 1997) (concluding that 24 the TPS statute “explicitly contemplates more than one designation” for one country because 8 U.S.C. 1254a(c)(1)(A)(i) refers to “the most recent designation of the state”). A TPS designation for a country that is already designated for TPS is called a “redesignation.” When DHS 25 redesignates a country for TPS, it generally has the effect of expanding the pool of potential beneficiaries to include individuals who came to the United States after the country was first designated for TPS.

29       <sup>14</sup> 8 U.S.C. 1254a(b)(2).

1       35. Once the Secretary has designated a particular country for TPS, individuals from 2       that country (or persons without nationality who last habitually resided in that country) may apply
3       for immigration status under the program. To be eligible for TPS, however, individuals from a
4       designated country must meet stringent requirements. These requirements include, among other 5       things, continuous physical presence in the United States from the most recent date of designation;
6       continuous residence in the United States from a (potentially earlier) date designated by the 7       Secretary; satisfaction of the criteria for admissibility as an immigrant; lack of disqualifying 8       criminal history (where more than one misdemeanor or a single felony is disqualifying); and 9       submission of an application, extensive documentation, and fees.<sup>15</sup>

10       36. Congress ensured that individuals who are ultimately granted protected status could 11      enjoy the freedom to live and work in the United States without fear of deportation. Under the 12      statute's clear directives, an individual who receives and maintains TPS "shall [be] authorize[d]" 13      to engage in employment in the United States; "shall not be detained" by the Secretary of 14      Homeland Security on the basis of immigration status; and "shall not [be] remove[d]" from the 15      United States by the Department of Homeland Security.<sup>16</sup>

16        37. The TPS statute requires the Secretary to periodically re-evaluate country
17 designations. At least 60 days before a particular designation expires, the Secretary must “review 18 the conditions in the foreign state . . . for which a designation is in effect” and determine whether 19 the country still meets the conditions for TPS.<sup>17</sup> The review requires “consultation with 20 appropriate agencies of the Government” and, ultimately, publication of notice in the Federal 21 Register.<sup>18</sup>

38. The review and consultation process typically begins months before the 60-day deadline. First,

1 (a division within USCIS) provides a Country Conditions Memo. In 2 addition, OP&S [Office of Policy and Strategy] (another division within 3 USCIS) drafts a Decision Memo that contains USCIS's
4 recommendation on what to do about the TPS designation. Once the 5 Decision Memo is finalized, the USCIS Director passes it on to the DHS
6 Secretary. The State Department provides further input (e.g., country 7 conditions, recommendations). At times, input can also come from other 8 government sources, but the above is the information consistently 9 provided to the DHS Secretary.<sup>19</sup>

10 39. The Secretary must terminate TPS only if the designated country "no longer 11 continues to meet the conditions for designation."<sup>20</sup> The statute does not permit consideration of 12 other grounds for termination. The effective date of any TPS termination must be at least 60 days 13 after publication of an official notice of termination, and may not precede the expiry of "the most 14 recent previous extension."<sup>21</sup> In other words, the statute does not permit the Secretary to cut short 15 a TPS period. The Secretary may, however, extend the period "to provide for an orderly 16 transition."<sup>22</sup>

17 40. If the Secretary does not terminate TPS for a particular country, either because she 18 affirmatively finds that the country continues to meet the conditions for designation or because she 19 simply fails to make a decision, then the designation "is extended" for a period of six months, or 20 by discretion of the Secretary, for a period of twelve or eighteen months.<sup>23</sup>

21 41. When a designation for a particular country is terminated, an individual TPS 22 holder's status will typically revert back to their original immigration status so long as that status 23 remains valid.

7 42. Venezuelans living in the United States first received temporary protection from 8 removal on January 19, 2021, when President Trump—on the last day of his first 9 Administration—directed the Secretaries of State and Homeland Security to “take appropriate 10 measures to defer for 18 months the removal of any national of Venezuela . . . who is present in 11 the United States as of January 20, 2021,” with limited exceptions, and “to take appropriate 12 measures to authorize employment for aliens whose removal has been deferred, as provided by 13 this memorandum, for the duration of such deferral.”<sup>24</sup>

14 43. In designating Venezuela for Deferred Enforced Departure, President Trump 15 declared:

16 [T]he Maduro regime is responsible for the worst humanitarian crisis in 17 the Western Hemisphere in recent memory. A catastrophic economic 18 crisis and shortages of basic goods and medicine have forced about five 19 million Venezuelans to flee the country, often under dangerous 20 conditions. . . . The deteriorative condition within Venezuela, which presents an ongoing national security threat to the safety and well-being of the American people, warrants the deferral of the removal of Venezuelan nationals who are present in the United States.<sup>25</sup>

21 44. On March 9, 2021 (under the Biden Administration), DHS designated Venezuela for 22 TPS based on the Secretary’s determination that “extraordinary and temporary conditions in the 23 foreign state prevent [Venezuelans] from returning safely” and “permitting [Venezuelans] to 24 remain temporarily in the United States” is not “contrary to the national interest of the United

1 States.”<sup>26</sup> The Secretary found that “Venezuela is currently facing a severe humanitarian 2 emergency” and:

3 [H]as been in the midst of a severe political and economic crisis for 4 several years . . . marked by a wide range of factors including: Economic 5 contraction; inflation and hyperinflation; deepening poverty; high levels 6 of unemployment; reduced access to and shortages of food and 7 medicine; a severely weakened medical system; the reappearance or 8 increased incidence of certain communicable diseases; a collapse in 9 basic services; water, electricity, and fuel shortages; political 10 polarization; institutional and political tensions; human rights abuses 11 and repression; crime and violence; corruption; increased human 12 mobility and displacement (including internal migration, emigration, 13 and return); and the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, among other 14 factors.<sup>27</sup>

15 45. Also on March 9, 2021, via the same Federal Register notice, DHS provided 16 employment authorization for Venezuelans covered by Deferred Enforced Departure.<sup>28</sup>

17 46. The 2021 Venezuela Designation allowed eligible Venezuelans who had 18 continuously resided in the United States since March 8, 2021 and been physically present in the 19 United States since March 9, 2021 to apply for TPS.<sup>29</sup>

20 47. On July 11, 2022, DHS issued a press release announcing then-Secretary Alejandro 21 Mayorkas’s decision to extend Venezuela’s TPS designation. The press release instructed:

22 17 Venezuelans who are currently eligible for TPS under the existing 18 designation but may have not yet applied with U.S. Citizenship and 19 Immigration Services (USCIS) should file their applications prior to the 20 September 9, 2022, application deadline, including those Venezuelans
21 who are covered under the January 2021 grant of Deferred Enforced
22 Departure (DED). Venezuela’s DED is set to expire July 20, 2022.<sup>30</sup>

DHS (July 11, 2022), <https://www.dhs.gov/archive/news/2022/07/11/dhs-announces-extension-temporary-protected-status-venezuela>.

1       48. Venezuela's Deferred Enforced Departure expired on July 20, 2022. Every person
2 who had been eligible for it was by then eligible for TPS, provided they could satisfy the more
3 stringent background check criteria required for TPS.

4       49. On September 8, 2022, DHS extended Venezuela's TPS designation for eighteen 5 months, through March 10, 2024.<sup>31</sup> The Secretary found that extension was warranted due to 6 ongoing “[e]xtraordinary and temporary conditions that prevent Venezuelan nationals from 7 returning in safety includ[ing] severe economic and political crises ongoing within Venezuela, 8 which have an impact across sectors, including limited access to food, basic services, and 9 adequate healthcare, and the deterioration of the rule of law and protection of human rights.”<sup>32</sup>
10 The Secretary also determined that “it is not contrary to the national interest of the United States 11 to permit Venezuelan TPS beneficiaries to remain in the United States temporarily.”<sup>33</sup> However, 12 because the decision was only an extension, and not also a redesignation, it did not provide 13 protection to Venezuelans who had arrived in the United States after March 9, 2021.

14       50. On October 3, 2023, DHS again extended the 2021 designation of Venezuela for 15 eighteen months, and also redesignated Venezuela for TPS for eighteen months.<sup>34</sup> The extension 16 of the 2021 designation ran from March 11, 2024 to September 10, 2025. The new 2023 17 redesignation ran from October 3, 2023 through April 2, 2025. The Secretary found that:

18       [E]xtraordinary and temporary conditions continue to prevent 19 Venezuelan nationals from returning in safety due to a severe 20 humanitarian emergency which has resulted in food insecurity and the 21 inability to access adequate medicine, healthcare, water, electricity, and 22 fuel. Additionally, human rights violations and abuses, high levels of 23 poverty, high levels of crime and violence, and heavy rains and flooding
24 prevent Venezuelan nationals from returning in safety and permitting
25 Venezuelan noncitizens to remain in the United States temporarily 26 would not be contrary to the interests of the United States.<sup>35</sup>

5 52. All individuals who were eligible for TPS under the 2021 Designation were also 6 eligible for TPS under the 2023 Designation, provided they registered in accordance with DHS 7 instructions.

8 53. DHS estimated that 243,000 Venezuelan TPS beneficiaries who first registered for 9 TPS under the 2021 Venezuela Designation were eligible to re-register for TPS under its 10 extension.<sup>37</sup>

11 54. In addition, DHS estimated “approximately 472,000 additional individuals may be 12 eligible for TPS under the redesignation of Venezuela. This population includes Venezuelan

15 January 2025 TPS Extension for Venezuela

16 55. On January 17, 2025, Secretary Mayorkas extended the 2023 Venezuela Designation 17 by eighteen months, through October 2, 2026.<sup>39</sup> The Secretary found that extraordinary and 18 temporary conditions in Venezuela continued to prevent nationals from returning in safety. He 19 explained:

20 Venezuela is experiencing a complex, serious and multidimensional 21 humanitarian crisis. The crisis has reportedly disrupted every aspect of 22 life in Venezuela. Basic services like electricity, internet access, and 23 water are patchy; malnutrition is on the rise; the healthcare system has 24 collapsed; and children receive poor or no education. Inflation rates are also among the highest in the world. Venezuela's complex crisis has pushed Venezuelans into poverty, hunger, poor health, crime, desperation and migration. Moreover, Nicolas Maduro's declaration of victory in the July 28, 2024 presidential election—which has been contested as fraudulent by the opposition—has been followed by yet another sweeping crackdown on dissent.<sup>40</sup>

56. The Secretary also determined that “it is not contrary to the national interest of the United States to permit Venezuelan TPS beneficiaries to remain in the United States temporarily.”<sup>41</sup>

57. The extension was effective immediately. The registration period opened that day and extended through September 10, 2025.<sup>42</sup>

58. The January 2025 Extension also explained that there would no longer be two separate filing processes for TPS designations for Venezuela. Rather:

To decrease confusion among stakeholders, ensure optimal operational processes, and maintain the same eligibility requirements, upon publication of this Notice, individuals registered under either the March 9, 2021 TPS designation or the October 3, 2023 TPS designation will be allowed to re-register under this extension. This would not, however, require that a beneficiary registered under the March 9, 2021 designation [ ] re-register at this time. Rather, it would provide such individuals with the option of doing so. Venezuela TPS beneficiaries who appropriately apply for TPS or re-register under this Notice and are approved by USCIS will obtain TPS through the same extension date of October 2, 2026.<sup>43</sup>

59. The January 2025 Extension also automatically extended relevant employment authorization documents. The notice instructed TPS holders that “if you already have an EAD with a ‘Card Expires’ date of September 10, 2025, April 2, 2025, March 10, 2024, or September 9, 2022, this Federal Register notice automatically extends it through April 2, 2026 without any further action on your part.”<sup>44</sup> It further instructed employers that they “should accept” an expired EAD accompanied by a copy of the January 17, 2025 Federal Register notice as proof of work authorization through April 2, 2026.<sup>45</sup>

3 Vacatur of TPS Extension Three Days After Secretary Noem's Confirmation

4       61. On January 20, 2025, President Trump was sworn in as President of the United 5 States.

6       62. That same day, President Trump issued an Executive Order titled "Protecting the 7 American People Against Invasion."<sup>47</sup> The "invasion" referenced in the order was the purported 8 "unprecedented flood of illegal immigration into the United States."<sup>48</sup> The Order mandated that 9 TPS designations be "appropriately limited in scope" in order to ameliorate the "continued 10 presence of illegal aliens in the United States":

11           The Secretary of State, the Attorney General, and the Secretary of 12 Homeland Security shall promptly take all appropriate action, consistent 13 with law, to rescind the policy decisions of the previous administration 14 that led to the increased or continued presence of illegal aliens in the 15 United States, and align any and all departmental activities with the 16 policies set out by this order and the immigration laws. Such action 17 should include, but is not limited to . . . ensuring that designations of 18 Temporary Protected Status are consistent with the provisions of section 19 244 of the INA (8 U.S.C. 1254a), and that such designations are 20 appropriately limited in scope and made for only so long as may be 21 necessary to fulfill the textual requirements of that statute[.]<sup>49</sup>

22       63. On January 25, 2025, Secretary Noem was sworn in as DHS Secretary.

23       64. On January 28, 2025, Secretary Noem vacated the January 2025 Extension for 24 Venezuela, rendering more than 600,000 Venezuelans vulnerable to the loss of legal status and 25 associated benefits in April or September 2025.<sup>50</sup> By the vacatur, Secretary Noem "revert[ed] to

1       65. Secretary Noem’s decision was the first vacatur of a TPS extension in the 35-year
2 history of the TPS statute.

3       66. On February 3, 2025, DHS formally published a notice in the Federal Register
4 vacating the January 2025 Extension.<sup>52</sup>

5       67. The vacatur asserted that the Secretary has “inherent authority under the INA to 6 reconsider any TPS-related determination, and upon reconsideration, to vacate or amend the 7 determination.”<sup>53</sup>

8       68. In the vacatur, Secretary Noem did not find any error in Secretary Mayorkas’s
9 conclusion that Venezuela continued to meet the conditions for TPS designation. Instead, her sole 10 reason for vacating the extension was her objection to the registration requirement procedures
11 established by Secretary Mayorkas, specifically his decision to permit individuals who initially 12 applied for TPS under the 2021 Venezuela Designation to re-register under the 2023 Designation.
13 Secretary Noem did not consider alternatives short of vacatur to resolve this purported problem.

14       69. Secretary Noem also implied that Secretary Mayorkas’ January 2025 extension 15 notice was inconsistent with the statute, which requires that a designation “remain in effect until 16 the effective date of the termination of the designation.”<sup>54</sup> But it is Secretary Noem’s vacatur, and 17 not the January 2025 Extension, which results in the designation being terminated prematurely.

18       70. The vacatur states that it vacates: “(1) [the] extension of the Venezuela 2023 TPS
19 designation, (2) the consolidation of filing processes for both designations, which, in effect, 20 resulted in the extension of the 2021 TPS designation, and (3) the EADs that were extended.”<sup>55</sup>

21       71. The vacatur further rescinds the automatic extension of employment authorization
22 granted by the January 2025 extension, invalidates employment authorization and approval notices 23 already granted, and cancels the ongoing processing of applications already filed. The notice 24 states:

1 Pursuant to this vacatur, USCIS will no longer accept Venezuela TPS

13 to any fees paid by these aliens as well.

14 Additionally, pursuant to this vacatur the automatic EAD extensions
15 provided in the [January 2025 Extension] are hereby rescinded. USCIS
16 will provide additional guidance regarding the two Venezuela TPS
17 designations on a future date in accordance with applicable laws.<sup>56</sup>

18 Fast-Track Termination of TPS for 350,000 Venezuelans

19 72. On February 1, 2025, Secretary Noem “decided to terminate” the 2023 Venezuela 20 Designation, ordering an end to the legal status of approximately 350,000 Venezuelans, effective 21 in April.<sup>57</sup>

22 73. The reasoning in Secretary Noem’s decision would also justify the termination of 23 TPS for the approximately 250,000 people protected by the 2021 Venezuela Designation. Under 24 the statute that decision must be made no later than July 2025.<sup>58</sup>

25 74. On February 5, 2025, DHS published a notice in the Federal Register terminating 26 the 2023 Venezuela Designation.<sup>59</sup>

27 75. The termination notice does not contend that the crisis conditions supporting the 28 2023 Venezuela Designation have ended, assuming instead that “the relevant conditions in 1 Venezuela remain both ‘extraordinary’ and ‘temporary.’”<sup>60</sup> Secretary Noem nonetheless

2 “determined that Venezuela no longer continues to meet the conditions for the 2023 designation”
3 because “it is contrary to the national interest to permit the covered Venezuelan nationals to 4 remain temporarily in the United States.”<sup>61</sup>

5 76. But the statute does not allow the Secretary to terminate a TPS designation based on 6 national interest. While the statute directs the Secretary to consider “the national interest of the 7 United States” when designating a country for TPS based on extraordinary and temporary 8 conditions,<sup>62</sup> subsequent review of the designation for purposes of either extension or termination 9 is to be based solely on “the conditions in the foreign state,” not conditions in this country.<sup>63</sup> 10 There is no precedent in the 35-year history of the TPS program for any designation being 11 terminated on national interest grounds.

13 Noem cited President Trump’s directives—his Executive Order, “Protecting the American People
14 Against Invasion,” his “recent, immigration and border-related executive orders and proclamations 15 [which] clearly articulated an array of policy imperatives bearing upon the national interest,” his 16 declaration of a “national emergency at the southern border,” and his directive to put “America 17 and American citizens first.”<sup>64</sup>

18 78. Most TPS holders lack any criminal history. Indeed, individuals are ineligible for 19 TPS if they have more than a single misdemeanor conviction. Yet the termination notice justifies 20 terminating the status of nearly 350,000 Venezuelan TPS holders because alleged members of a 21 Venezuelan gang have been “blamed for sex trafficking, drug smuggling, police shootings, 22 kidnappings, and the exploitation of migrants,” and because President Trump recently placed that

1 gang on a “list of transnational criminal organizations.”<sup>65</sup> In elaborating her finding that extension 2 is not in the national interest, the notice provides:

3 TPS has allowed a significant population of inadmissible or illegal 4 aliens without a path to lawful immigration status to settle in the 5 interior of the United States[.] . . . Among these Venezuelan nationals 6 who have crossed into the United States are members of the 7 Venezuelan gang known as Tren de Aragua.<sup>66</sup>

8 79. Despite that the termination notice issued only two days after the vacatur notice (and 9 less than two weeks after Noem took office), the notice proclaims that the decision to terminate
10 the 2023 Venezuela Designation followed “consultation with the appropriate U.S. Government 11 agencies,” a review of “country conditions,” and a “consider[ation of] whether permitting 12 Venezuelan nationals covered by the 2023 designation is contrary to the national interest.”<sup>67</sup>

13 80. The termination takes effect April 7, 2025 or 60 days after the publication of the 14 termination notice. This is the earliest possible date of termination allowed by law.<sup>68</sup> While the 15 termination notice recognizes the discretionary authority of the DHS Secretary to provide for an 16 “‘orderly transition’ period if she determines it to be appropriate,” it rejects one as improper 17 here.<sup>69</sup> The termination notice justifies this in light of the Secretary’s determination that the 18 termination is compelled in the “national interest,” and her finding that there are limited “putative 19 reliance interests.”<sup>70</sup>

20 81. The termination notice does not extend the employment authorization documents for 21 2023 Venezuela registrants beyond the date permitted by the original 2023 Designation. Thus,
22 TPS holders protected by the 2023 Venezuela Designation have TPS-related work authorization 23 only until April 2, 2025—five days prior to the expiry of their legal status—even though the

3 Haiti TPS Designations

4 Haiti’s 2010 and 2011 Designations

5 82. Haiti was first designated for TPS on January 21, 2010 when the DHS Secretary 6 found that “extraordinary and temporary conditions” in Haiti warranted TPS designation for 7 eighteen months following a 7.0 magnitude earthquake that affected three million people, about 8 one-third of Haiti’s population.<sup>72</sup> Haiti was redesignated for eighteen months the following year, 9 on May 19, 2011, allowing more recently arrived Haitians to register for TPS.<sup>73</sup>

10 83. TPS for Haiti was extended four times between 2010 and the beginning of the first 11 Trump administration—in May 2011 (along with the redesignation), October 2012, March 2014, 12 and August 2015. Each time, DHS determined, after consultation with the State Department, that 13 it remained unsafe for Haitian TPS holders to return, and extended TPS for Haiti for eighteen 14 months.<sup>74</sup>

15 84. Under the first Trump Administration, Secretary John Kelly initially extended 16 Haiti’s TPS designation in May 2017, but did so for the minimum six months allowed by statute.
17 That decision foreshadowed imminent termination, advising Haitian TPS holders to “prepare for 18 their return to Haiti.”<sup>75</sup> Six months later, on January 18, 2018, Acting Secretary Elaine Duke 19 terminated TPS for Haiti on the ground that country conditions in Haiti “no longer support its

2 termination to enter into effect to “provide time for an orderly transition,” as permitted by 3 statute.<sup>77</sup>

4 85. This 2018 termination of TPS for Haiti never entered into effect due to legal 5 challenges. On October 3, 2018, in Ramos v. Nielsen, this Court preliminarily enjoined the Haiti 6 termination and three others, finding that the plaintiffs had shown a likelihood of success on their 7 Administrative Procedure Act claim that the Trump Administration’s terminations arose from an 8 unexplained change in DHS practice, and serious questions on the merits of their Equal Protection 9 claim that the decisions were motivated by racism towards non-white, non-European 10 immigrants.<sup>78</sup>

11 86. On April 11, 2019, in Saget v. Trump, a federal district judge in the Eastern District 12 of New York also enjoined the defendants from implementing the Haiti TPS termination. After a 13 week-long hearing, that court similarly concluded that Plaintiffs were likely to prevail on their 14 APA claim and had raised serious questions on the merits of their Equal Protection claims. It 15 found evidence “suggestive of a pre-determined outcome not anchored in an objective assessment,

1 Secretary Mayorkas' 2021, 2023, and 2024 Haiti Decisions

2 88. On August 3, 2021, in the wake of the assassination of Haitian President Jovenel 3 Moïse, Secretary Mayorkas newly designated Haiti for TPS for an eighteen-month period on the 4 basis of extraordinary and temporary conditions that prevented Haitian nationals from returning to 5 Haiti in safety.<sup>81</sup> Secretary Mayorkas cited Haiti's "deteriorating political crisis, violence and a 6 staggering increase in human rights abuses" as well as rising food insecurity and malnutrition, 7 waterborne disease epidemics, and "high vulnerability to natural hazards, all of which have been 8 further exacerbated by the coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) pandemic."<sup>82</sup>

9 89. On January 26, 2023 Secretary Mayorkas extended Haiti's 2021 designation for 10 eighteen months and also redesignated Haiti for TPS. After a "thorough review" the Secretary 11 concluded that "Haiti is experiencing economic, security, political, and health crises 12 simultaneously," including gang violence, a humanitarian crisis, and political upheaval, and that 13 these extraordinary and temporary conditions continued to prevent Haitian nationals from 14 returning to Haiti in safety.<sup>83</sup> The Secretary also concluded that "redesignation is not contrary to 15 the national interest of the United States."<sup>84</sup>

16 90. On July 1, 2024, DHS again extended and redesignated Haiti for TPS on the basis of 17 extraordinary and temporary conditions. Secretary Mayorkas found that "Haiti continues to 18 experience simultaneous economic, security, political, and health crises," including the continuing 19 threat of gang violence, the dysfunctional and worsening political situation, and limited access of 20 citizens to healthcare, food, and water.<sup>85</sup> He further found that "it is not contrary to the national

5 Secretary Noem’s February 2025 Partial Vacatur of TPS for Haiti

6 92. On February 20, 2025, DHS issued a press release titled “Secretary Noem Rescinds 7 Previous Administration’s Extension of Haiti’s Temporary Protected Status.”<sup>88</sup> The release 8 announced that Secretary Noem had “vacated a decision by the previous administration to extend 9 Haiti’s [TPS] by 18 months” as “part of President Trump’s promise to rescind policies that were 10 magnets for illegal immigration and inconsistent with the law.”<sup>89</sup> The release asserted that “[f]or 11 decades the TPS system has been exploited and abused” and claimed that “Biden and Mayorkas 12 attempted to tie the hands of the Trump administration by extending Haiti’s Temporary Protected 13 Status by 18 months.”<sup>90</sup> The release makes this assertion despite that the 2024 Haiti redesignation 14 and extension notice was from July, well before the election of Donald Trump as president.

15 93. Later that same day, DHS “pre-published” a Federal Register notice entitled “Partial 16 Vacatur of 2024 Temporary Protected Status Decision for Haiti.”<sup>91</sup> In the notice, Secretary Noem 17 explains that she had “reconsider[ed]” the July 2024 Haitian Redesignation and Extension in light 18 of the directive in President Trump’s Executive Order 14159, Protecting the American People 19 Against Invasion, “to ensure that the TPS designations are consistent with the TPS statute and

(Feb. 24, 2025).

1 ‘are appropriately limited in scope and made for only so long as may be necessary to fulfill the 2 textual requirements of that statute.’’’<sup>92</sup>

3 94. Secretary Noem further announced that she was ‘‘partially vacating the June 4, 4 2024,<sup>93</sup> decision to reduce the designation and extension period from eighteen months to twelve 5 months and to make a corresponding change to the initial registration period for new applicants 6 under the 2024 designation,’’ cutting that registration period short by six months.<sup>94</sup>

7 95. Under the partial vacatur, Haiti’s TPS designation is set to end on August 3, 2025, 8 unless extended. The Federal Register notice instructs:

9 [e]mployers, and Federal, State and local government agencies (such 10 as Departments of Motor Vehicles) that previously accepted or are 11 presented with an EAD with the TPS category code of A-12 or C-19 12 that expires on February 3, 2026 must update their records to note that 13 the validity date of the document is through August 3, 2025.<sup>95</sup>

14 96. As justification for the partial vacatur, the Federal Register notice stated that the 15 2024 extension was invalid because it did not specify why an eighteen-month period was selected 16 for extension, as opposed to a six- or twelve-month period, and asserted that the congressionally 17 authorized ‘‘default extension period’’ is six months.<sup>96</sup> The notice also asserted that Secretary 18 Mayorkas did not provide enough detail as to why TPS for Haitians was not ‘‘contrary to the 19 national interest,’’ particularly as applied to ‘‘those who entered the country unlawfully.’’<sup>97</sup> 20 Additionally, Secretary Noem said that the 2024 Extension cited statistics from 2022-2023, in 21 addition to earlier years, suggesting that these were outdated statistics, albeit acknowledging that

1 the July 2024 notice “cites some country conditions reports that are relatively proximate to the [] 2 decision.”<sup>98</sup>

3 97. DHS estimates that 521,000 Haitian nationals rely on TPS for legal status and work 4 authorization.<sup>99</sup> The Secretary described this unprecedented action to eliminate six months of legal 5 status and work authorization for over 500,000 people as “modest.”<sup>100</sup> She considered that her 6 actions adequately contemplated any “putative reliance interests” in the July 2024 decision 7 because Haitians have been able to register for the extension for seven months; and because she 8 made the decision to only partially vacate the extension rather than vacate it in its entirety.<sup>101</sup>

9 98. Secretary Noem stated that DHS will not recall existing TPS-related documentation, 10 including work permits with a February 3, 2026 end date (which many Haitian TPS holders have), 11 but stated that these documents will only remain valid through August 3, 2025, contrary to the

13 99. Secretary Noem’s justifications for the partial vacatur of TPS for Haiti have no 14 support in either the historical record of TPS determinations or statutory language. First, the TPS 15 statute authorizes Secretaries to designate or extend TPS for six-, twelve-, or eighteen-month 16 durations, but does not create any separate requirement that a Secretary must explain the reason to 17 choose a particular duration (beyond her implicit judgment as to how long conditions are likely to 18 remain unsafe).<sup>103</sup> Over the 35-year history of the statute, in virtually all cases in which 19 Secretaries designated or extended TPS for a country, they announced the length of the 20 designation without elaborating their reasons for choosing that duration and not another. Indeed, <sup>103</sup> See 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(2), (b)(3)(C) (initial designation or extension for period of 6, 12 or eighteen months, at the “discretion of the [Secretary]”).

1 Secretary Noem’s partial vacatur is itself consistent with that practice; it does not explain why it 2 chose a twelve-month period.

3 100. In the context of Haiti, no Secretary has ever explained in the Federal Register why 4 they chose a particular duration rather than an alternative. Even when Secretary Kelly announced 5 the atypical six-month extension of TPS in 2017, he did not elaborate on his reasoning for 6 choosing that duration, or explain why a longer duration was not appropriate.<sup>104</sup>

7 101. Contrary to Secretary Noem’s statement in the Federal Register, there is no default 8 period for an affirmative decision to extend a TPS designation; the six-month default applies only 9 if the Secretary fails to make any determination. Of the more than 200 TPS extensions that have 10 occurred since 1990, TPS has been extended for a six-month period on only a handful of 11 occasions—for instance, in Secretary Kelly’s atypical six-month extension of TPS for Haiti, a few 12 times when an automatic extension was granted due to the failure of a Secretary to make a timely 13 determination, and in a few other instances, such as during the short-lived Ebola crisis.<sup>105</sup>

14 102. Second, while Section 1254a(b)(1)(C) prohibits the Secretary from designating a 15 country for TPS if she finds that doing so “is contrary to the national interest of the United 16 States,”<sup>106</sup> the statute does not require that a Secretary elaborate the reasons why a designation is 17 not contrary to the national interest. Further, national interest is relevant only to whether a country 18 should be designated for TPS initially, not whether an existing designation should be extended.<sup>107</sup>

19 103. The historical practice is consistent with the statute’s mandate: when explaining 20 designations pursuant to Section 1254a(b)(1)(C), Secretaries typically assert that the designation is 21 “not contrary to the national interest,” but do not elaborate further. And Secretary Noem’s 22 February 1, 2025 termination of TPS for Venezuela is the only instance in the 35-year history of

1 TPS in which a Secretary has terminated a TPS designation due to a finding that the designation 2 was no longer in the national interest.

3 104. Lastly, Secretary Noem's stated concern that the July 2024 notice considered 4 outdated statistics is supported by neither the statute nor historical practice—the statute does not 5 limit what kinds of evidence may be considered, and Secretaries have traditionally considered 6 facts both close in time to and further from the determination, as the July 2024 notice also does.

7 THE TRUMP ADMINISTRATION PUBLICLY COMMITTED TO END TPS
8 PROTECTIONS AND DESTROY THE TPS PROGRAM

9 Secretary Noem, President Trump, and Vice President Vance Promised to Terminate TPS

10 105. Secretary Noem, President Trump and Vice President Vance have repeatedly 11 characterized TPS itself as illegal, and committed to terminate TPS long before the Secretary had 12 any opportunity to consider the factors required by the statute. Secretary Noem's Venezuela and 13 Haiti decisions treat the program itself, and those protected by it, as illegal.

14 106. DHS never acknowledged or explained the departure from the agency's prior 15 recognition that Congress lawfully authorized TPS designations, that TPS is itself legal, and that 16 individual TPS designations may be in the national interest.

17 107. Both prior to and since assuming her position running DHS, Secretary Noem has 18 reiterated her view that TPS, as it has been used, is illegal. At her confirmation hearing, Secretary 19 Noem stated that “[TPS] has been abused and manipulated by the Biden Administration and that 20 will no longer be allowed . . . and these extensions going forward the way that they are, the 21 program was intended to be temporary[.]”<sup>108</sup>

22 108. Secretary Noem defined TPS holders as law violators just by virtue of having this 23 humanitarian status. In announcing her decision to end TPS for Venezuela, Secretary Noem said 24 the termination “stopped” former Secretary Mayorkas from letting Venezuelan TPS holders “stay 25 here and violate our laws for another 18 months.”<sup>109</sup>

26

28 <sup>109</sup> Dkt. 37-14 at 2–3.

1           109. In a February 2, 2025 “Meet the Press” appearance the day the Venezuela vacatur 2 was published, Secretary Noem said, “[T]he TPP [sic] program has been abused, and it doesn’t 3 have integrity right now.”<sup>110</sup>

4           110. In her February 20, 2025 press statement announcing the partial vacatur of TPS for 5 Haiti, Secretary Noem elaborated, with emphasis, that “TPS is a type of immigration status 6 available to nationals of certain designated countries that allows aliens, even if they entered the 7 country illegally, the ability to reside temporarily in the U.S.”<sup>111</sup> The press statement reiterated 8 what Secretary Noem asserted at her confirmation hearing—her belief that “[f]or decades the TPS 9 system has been exploited and abused.” DHS used as an “example” of the “exploit[ation]” of the 10 system that “Haiti has been designated for TPS since 2010”; and that “more Haitian nationals, 11 even those who entered the U.S. illegally” have benefited from “each extension.” (Here, she 12 presumably meant each “redesignation,” because an extension does not allow additional Haitian 13 nationals to benefit). DHS also stated that, by partially vacating the lawfully granted extension, it 14 was “returning integrity to the TPS system,” and “returning TPS to its original status: temporary.”
15 The press statement also referenced the rescission of the previous administration’s extension of 16 TPS for Venezuela, apparently linking these two vacaturs to the same goal.

17           111. President Trump, Vice President Vance, and Trump surrogates have likewise
18 championed the view that TPS designations are “illegal”—or, in the Vice President’s words, a 19 “magic government wand.”<sup>112</sup> They have made clear their intent to target TPS and/or TPS 20 designations for termination.

21           112. President Trump, while campaigning, said that he would personally revoke TPS and 22 that he did not consider it legal. President Trump responded to an interviewer’s question as to

2 “revoke TPS status” by saying: “You have to remove the people; you cannot destroy our country
3 . . . In my opinion, it’s not legal. . . . Absolutely I would revoke [TPS].”<sup>113</sup>

4 113. Though TPS holders in Springfield, Ohio were welcomed by local officials and 5 employers, and legally authorized to live and work in the United States through the TPS program, 6 President Trump decried TPS as a “little trick,” asserting Haitian migrants “are illegal immigrants

9 acknowledged that the Haitians in Springfield about which he was speaking were TPS holders.<sup>115</sup>

10 114. Vice President Vance, during the campaign, expressed a goal of ending TPS: “We’re 11 going to stop doing mass grants of Temporary Protected Status. Of course, you’re going to have 12 people fleeing from tyranny, but that happens on a case-by-case basis, not by waving the magic

14 individuals (unlike asylum and other forms of fear-based immigration relief), this statement can 15 only be understood as an attack on TPS itself.

16 115. Vice President Vance expressed this view repeatedly. In a September 2024 CNN 17 interview, he disputed the anchor’s characterization of TPS holders as being in the United States 18 legally. The future vice president called TPS designations a “magic amnesty wand . . . giving

7 The media loves to say that the Haitian migrants, hundreds of 8 thousands of them, by the way . . . they are here legally. And what they 9 mean is that Kamala Harris used two separate programs, mass parole 10 and temporary protective status. She used two programs to wave a

Kamala Harris waves the wand illegally and says these people are now

1           119. President Trump's motivation to terminate TPS is not new. During the first Trump 2 Administration, DHS Secretaries faced unrelenting pressure from the White House to reach its 3 "desired result of terminating TPS" and responded by ordering pre-textual terminations of TPS
4 designations for nearly everyone who held the status. Those termination decisions were ultimately 5 struck down in litigation.<sup>121</sup>

6           120. Secretary Noem's actions follow this familiar pattern, and show that she was 7 motivated in part in response to a clear mandate from President Trump and other Trump
8 administration immigration officials. This is evident by her reliance on President Trump's policy 9 objections to support both her determination that extending TPS for Venezuela was not in the 10 national interest and her partial vacatur of the Haiti designation and extension.

11           SECRETARY NOEM AND PRESIDENT TRUMP EXPRESSED DISCRIMINATORY
12           ANIMUS TOWARDS VENEZUELAN AND HAITIAN TPS HOLDERS

13           121. Secretary Noem's vacatur and termination decisions were motivated in significant 14 part by animus against Venezuelans and Haitians based on their perceived race, ethnicity, and 15 national origin. The animus is evidenced by numerous statements made by Secretary Noem, 16 President Trump and other Trump administration officials. A limited number of those statements 17 are described herein. They leave no doubt as to the speaker's discriminatory motives against non-18 white immigrants in general and Venezuelans and Haitians in particular.

1 Secretary Noem's Racist Statements

2 122. In announcing the vacatur of the Venezuela TPS extension in a “Fox and Friends” 3 interview on January 29, 2025, Secretary Noem described Venezuelans in the United States as 4 “dirt bags”: “Today we signed an executive order within the Department of Homeland Security in 5 a direction that we were not going to follow through on what he [former Secretary Mayorkas] did 6 to tie our hands, that we are going to follow the process, evaluate all of these individuals that are 7 in our country, including the Venezuelans that are here and members of TdA. Listen, . . . the 8 people of this country want these dirt bags out. They want their communities to be safe. . . . So, 9 this is part of our plan to make sure that we’re protecting America, keeping it safe again, just like 10 President Trump promised.”<sup>122</sup>

11 123. This was not an isolated occurrence. Secretary Noem has repeatedly described 12 immigrants, and particularly those from Venezuela, as “dirt bags.”<sup>123</sup>

13 124. The vast majority of Venezuelan TPS holders have no criminal history, and in 14 general people are ineligible for TPS if they have more than a single misdemeanor conviction.
15 Nonetheless, Secretary Noem has also sought to disparage Venezuelan TPS holders as 16 “criminals.” At her confirmation hearing, Secretary Noem said: “[T]his extension [of TPS] of over 17 600,000 Venezuelans [] is alarming when you look at what we’ve seen in different states, 18 including Colorado with gangs doing damage and harming the individuals and the people that live 19 there.”<sup>124</sup>

20 125. She has also repeatedly conflated Venezuelan TPS holders with members of a 21 Venezuelan gang which the Trump administration designated as a foreign terrorist organization.

1 On the January 29 “Fox and Friends” interview, Secretary Noem described ending TPS for 2 Venezuelans as necessary in order to “evaluate all of these individuals that are in our country, 3 including the Venezuelans that are here and members of TdA,” referring to Tren de Aragua.<sup>125</sup>

4 126. Secretary Noem also conflated TPS holders and Tren de Aragua gang members in 5 the Venezuela termination notice itself. For instance, she asserted that “TPS has allowed a 6 significant population of inadmissible or illegal aliens without a path to lawful immigration status 7 to settle in the interior of the United States,” and that “[a]mong these Venezuelan nationals . . . are 8 members of the Venezuelan gang known as Tren de Aragua.”<sup>126</sup> The notice makes no assertion 9 that any TPS holders are TdA members; and DHS has provided no evidence of that on any 10 occasion. The notice does not even make any assertion that there is a large number of TdA 11 members in the United States; and DHS has never asserted that either.

12 127. On February 2, 2025, the publication date of the Federal Register notice announcing 13 the vacatur, Secretary Noem appeared on NBC News’ “Meet the Press” and said:

14 [F]olks from Venezuela that have come into this country are members 15 of TdA. And remember, Venezuela purposely emptied out their 16 prisons, emptied out their mental health facilities and sent them to the 17 United States of America. So we are ending that extension of that 18 program, adding some integrity back into it. And this administration’s evaluating all of our programs to make sure they truly are something that’s to the benefit of the United States, so that they’re not to the benefit of criminals.<sup>127</sup>

19 128. Secretary Noem’s baseless assertion that Venezuela emptied out prisons and mental 20 institutions to send people to the United States long predates her term as Secretary. She has made 21 this false claim repeatedly.<sup>128</sup> One year before she was named DHS Secretary, Noem already

4 129. In a CBS News interview on March 5, 2024, Secretary Noem asserted that the 5 “invasion” by Venezuelan (and Cuban) immigrants constituted an existential threat to the country.
6 “We’ve seen these countries that hate us empty out their prisons, their mental institutions. They’ve

1                   President Trump's Racist Statements

2                   134. From his candidacy for his first term as president through the present, President 3                   Trump has repeatedly denigrated people perceived to be non-white immigrants. He has 4                   specifically targeted both TPS holders generally and Venezuelans and Haitians.

5                   135. Secretary Noem's reliance on President Trump's objectives in justifying her vacatur 6                   and termination decisions demonstrated her adoption of President Trump's animus as well as her 7                   response to pressure from President Trump and the White House to reach a quick decision to end
8                   TPS protections. Indeed, when publicizing the Venezuela TPS vacatur in a January 29, 2025 9                   interview, Secretary Noem explained that the vacatur reflected President Trump's "desire" to 10                   make sure TPS was "used properly," adding that "when the President gives a directive, the 11                   Department of Homeland Security will follow it."<sup>143</sup> The February 5, 2025 termination notice for 12                   Venezuela and the February 24, 2025 partial vacatur notice for Haiti both explicitly cite President 13                   Trump's immigration policy agenda as justifications.<sup>144</sup>

14                   136. During his prior administration, President Trump repeatedly denigrated immigrants
15                   from countries designated for TPS, including Haiti, El Salvador, and Honduras. Most infamously, 16                   he referred to countries designated for TPS as "shithole" countries in a conversation with 17                   legislators about TPS, saying "Why do we need more Haitians?" He asked officials to "take them 18                   out" of the immigration proposal. He expressed a preference, instead, for immigrants from 19                   countries "such as Norway."<sup>145</sup>

3 “unbelievable places and countries, countries that are a disaster,” when speaking about 4 immigrants.<sup>146</sup>

5           138. President Trump has sought to dehumanize immigrants, including TPS holders in 6 particular, through other statements. For months, he repeated and amplified the false claim that 7 Haitian TPS holders were “eating the dogs” and “eating the cats,” “eating the pets of the people

1           142. President Trump, while campaigning in 2023, repeatedly decried non-white 2 immigrants for “poisoning the blood of our country.”<sup>156</sup>

3           143. In October 2024, during an interview with conservative radio host Hugh Hewitt, 4 President Trump further emphasized the genetic inferiority of non-white immigrants. He said:
5 “How about allowing people to come to an open border . . . Many of them murdered far more 6 than one person, and they’re now happily living in the United States.” He stated: “You know, now 7 a murderer, I believe this, it’s in their genes. And we got a lot of bad genes in our country right 8 now.” In contrast, when addressing a predominately white crowd at a campaign rally in 9 Minnesota, he told them that they have “good genes.”<sup>157</sup>

10          144. At a rally one week before the 2024 election, President Trump described the country 11 as “occupied” by criminal migrants—heaping scorn on “savage” Venezuelan gang members in 12 particular. “We’re not going to have a country any longer. That’s who we’re allowing in. The 13 United States is now an occupied country, but it will soon be an occupied country no longer. . . .
14 November 5th, 2024 . . . will be Liberation Day in America. . . . I will rescue every city and town 15 that has been invaded and conquered.”<sup>158</sup>

16          145. During his first term in office, President Trump also conflated large groups of 17 immigrants, and sometimes even all of them, with members of the MS-13 gang.<sup>159</sup> In his first 18 State of the Union address, he suggested that the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals

1 (“DACA”) program, recipients of which are immigrants first brought to the United States as

3 146. During his first term, when referencing 40,000 Nigerian immigrants, he complained 4 that they would “never go back to their huts” in Africa, expressing his disdain for Black 5 immigrants.<sup>161</sup>

6 147. During a January 2025 interview on Fox News, President Trump falsely claimed 7 that people from “jails and mental institutions from other countries and gang members, right off 8 the streets of the toughest cities in the world, are being brought to the United States of America 9 and emptied out into our country.”<sup>162</sup> There is no basis for this claim.<sup>163</sup>

10 148. In the same interview, President Trump underscored his prejudice by stating that 11 “you can look at” “some” migrants “and you can say ‘could be trouble, could be trouble.’.”<sup>164</sup>

12 149. Like Secretary Noem, President Trump has singled out Venezuela for particular 13 opprobrium. He has contended that Venezuelans have “destroyed the fabric of our country.”<sup>165</sup>

14 150. President Trump has used dehumanizing language and repeatedly called Venezuelan 15 immigrants “animals.” For instance, in 2024 he asserted that, “[e]very day, Americans . . . are

2 “talking a lot about Venezuela because Aurora [Colorado] is really infected by Venezuela.”<sup>167</sup>
3 Local officials rejected these assertions.<sup>168</sup> One analysis by Axios of 109 of President Trump’s 4 speeches, debates, and interviews found that he called Venezuelan migrants “criminals” at least 5 seventy times between September 1, 2023 to October 2, 2024.<sup>169</sup>

6 151. In March 2025, the Trump administration dramatically escalated its rhetoric and 7 actions against Venezuelans, relying on purported TdA membership as justification for deporting 8 more than 200 Venezuelans to a Salvadoran terrorist detention center, in apparent violation of a 9 court order.<sup>170</sup> The administration cited the Alien Enemies Act—a 1798 law that facilitates

3 Venezuelans being roughly hustled off a plane in El Salvador in the dark of night, bent over, amid 4 a massive security presence, describing the Venezuelans as “monsters.”<sup>172</sup>

5 152. President Trump has a long history of making false statements associating 6 Venezuelan refugees with criminality. He has falsely stated that Venezuelan “prisons are . . . at the 7 lowest point in terms of emptiness that they’ve ever been[]” because Venezuela was “taking their 8 people out of those prisons by the thousands” and sending them to the United States.<sup>173</sup>

9 153. President Trump has also made disparaging remarks about Latin American countries 10 and people, frequently relying on crude and derogatory stereotypes to stoke fear about 11 immigration.

12 154. President Trump has also repeatedly “retweeted” avowed white nationalists, such as 13 @WhiteGenocideTM, as well as publicly dined with prominent, self-declared white supremacists, 14 thereby endorsing their racist views and amplifying their racist message.<sup>174</sup>

15 155. The Trump Administration has not shown similar opposition to immigrant 16 populations perceived as white. On the contrary, on February 7, 2025 President Trump signed 17 Executive Order No. 14204, Addressing Egregious Actions of the Republic of South Africa, which

1 [T]ake appropriate steps, consistent with law, to prioritize 2 humanitarian relief, including admission and resettlement through the 3 United States Refugee Admissions Program, for Afrikaners in South 4 Africa who are victims of unjust racial discrimination.

5 156. The White House referred to Afrikaner activists who lobbied for the Trump 6 Administration's support as "civil rights leaders."<sup>175</sup> Trump's Executive Order to protect white 7 South Africans yet again makes clear that his administration strongly prefers white immigrants 8 over those perceived as non-white.

9 157. Together, all of President Trump's repeated statements denigrating immigrants 10 perceived to be non-white, and targeting Venezuelans, Haitians, and TPS holders in particular, 11 have not functioned merely as hateful rhetoric. They have also worked as a call to action for those 12 serving him.

Statements of Trump Surrogates

13 158. Like President Trump, prominent officials who exerted influence to ensure that 14 DHS's decision-making process on TPS favored termination also harbor racial animus against 15 immigrants perceived as non-white in general and Venezuelans and Haitians in particular. These 16 officials have been motivated by their racial animosity to intervene in and influence the TPS 17 decision-making process towards termination.

18 159. For example, Vice President Vance has repeatedly amplified unfounded rumors 19 about Haitian immigrants eating pets. Despite the lack of corroborating evidence, he declared that 20 if he "ha[s] to create stories" about Haitian migrants "so that the American media actually pays 21 attention to the suffering of the American people, then that's what I'm going to do."<sup>176</sup>

1       160. Additionally, Vice President Vance disparaged Haitian TPS holders with 2 longstanding stereotypes<sup>177</sup> of immigrants as dangerous criminals and spreaders of disease. He 3 accused Haitians in Springfield of triggering “a massive rise in communicable diseases, rent 4 prices, car insurance rates, and crime,” stating “[t]his is what happens when you drop 20,000 5 people into a small community.”<sup>178</sup> He specifically stated that Haitians caused “TB and HIV” to 6 be “on the rise.”<sup>179</sup>

7       161. Stephen Miller, Deputy Chief of Staff to the President, has long expressed support 8 for White Nationalism, “promoted white nationalist literature,” and “pushed racist immigration 9 stories” to the media.<sup>180</sup> Miller lauded historical immigration laws that imposed quotas based on 10 racist assumptions.<sup>181</sup> For years, Miller promoted the ideas that non-white immigrants were

1       162. Miller has been described as an “early architect[] of the Trump administration’s 2 immigration policies,” and has prioritized curtailing both legal and illegal immigration.<sup>183</sup> When 3 he was the senior advisor to the President during Trump’s first term in office, Miller repeatedly 4 called DHS officials to urge termination of TPS.<sup>184</sup>

5       163. Secretary of State Marco Rubio, who was purportedly consulted in Secretary
6 Noem’s review of the Venezuela and Haiti TPS designations, has demonstrated how Trump 7 surrogates respond to his call to action. In 2022, when he was Senator, Rubio advocated for the 8 extension of TPS for Venezuela, calling it “absolutely essential” to avoid a “very real death 9 sentence for countless Venezuelans who have fled their country.”<sup>185</sup> He even co-sponsored 10 legislation to redesignate TPS for Venezuela.<sup>186</sup> However, more recently, Secretary Rubio 11 embraced President Trump’s racist talking points about Venezuela, espousing in 2024 the 12 “exaggerate[ed]” depiction of Tren de Aragua as “an invading criminal army from a prison in 13 Venezuela that has spread their brutality and chaos to U.S. cities and small towns.”<sup>187</sup>

14 The Trump Administration’s Previous Racist Attempts to End TPS

15       164. This is not the first time that an administration guided by President Trump has 16 embarked on an unlawful campaign to destroy TPS in violation of the APA and Equal Protection 17 Clause.

1       165. During President Trump’s first term, every federal district court to consider the 2 question found “evidence that President Trump harbors an animus against non-white, non-
3 European aliens which influenced his (and thereby the Secretary’s) decision to end the TPS
4 designation[s]” for El Salvador, Haiti, Sudan, and Nicaragua in 2017 and 2018.<sup>188</sup>

5       166. The evidence adduced in those cases further illustrates that the conduct challenged 6 here is part of a premeditated effort to terminate TPS without regard to applicable law or 7 standards, and to further a racist agenda.<sup>189</sup>

8       167. Political appointees during the first Trump administration also sought to paint TPS 9 holders as criminals and to manufacture evidence to support this impossible claim—to justify the 10 termination of designations, and the undermining of the TPS program. A federal district court 11 found that Acting Secretary Duke decided to terminate TPS for Haiti for the sake of “agenda 12 adherence” to the “America first” platform, without regard to her consideration of country 13 conditions under the TPS statute.<sup>190</sup> Acting Secretary Duke specifically sought out a rationale to 14 “separate” out Haiti.<sup>191</sup> Additionally, subordinates of then-DHS Secretary John Kelly covertly 15 sought data on the number of Haitian TPS holders who committed crimes and relied on public 16 assistance, despite the fact that virtually any criminal record is disqualifying for TPS.<sup>192</sup> Secretary ‘America first.’”); Saget, 375 F. Supp. 3d at 322.

1 Kelly and other DHS and USCIS personnel tried to use these data to demonstrate that extending 2 TPS to Haitians would not be in the “national interest.”<sup>193</sup> A federal district court found that “[t]he 3 information sought by the Secretary [Kelly] coincides with racial stereotypes – i.e., that non-4 whites commit crimes and are on the public dole.”<sup>194</sup>

5 168. During President Trump’s first term in office, the pressure from President Trump 6 and the White House on the DHS Secretary’s TPS decision-making was less evident and public
7 than here. The federal district court nonetheless found that “Acting Secretary Duke’s writings
8 suggest that she, in her role at DHS, was largely carrying out or conforming with a predetermined 9 presidential agenda to end TPS.”<sup>195</sup> There, Acting Secretary Duke, in separate personal writings, 10 expressed that her TPS decision-making was based on “an America first view,” a term that 11 invoked then-President Trump’s racist views preferring immigration from majority-white
12 European countries.<sup>196</sup> Here, by contrast, Secretary Noem has included President Trump’s

16 FAMILIES, AND THEIR COMMUNITIES

17 169. More than 1.1 million TPS holders will lose the TPS status they were scheduled to 18 have as a result of Defendants’ vacaturs. More than 350,000 Venezuelan TPS holders stand to lose 19 their employment authorization as soon as April 2, 2025 and their legal status on April 7, 2025 as 20 a result of the termination of the 2023 Venezuela Designation. The remainder have seen the status 21 granted them under lawful decisions of the previous administration cut short. When their countries 22 come up for review next—no later than June 2025 for 500,000 Haitians and July 2025 for the 23 remaining 250,000 Venezuelans—Secretary Noem will likely terminate their status without regard

1 to the country conditions, contrary to statute. The scale of the harm wrought by Defendants' 2 actions to eliminate TPS protection for Venezuelans and Haitians will be massive if not reversed.

3 Loss of Legal Status, Employment Authorization, and Drivers Licenses

4 170. TPS holders are facing the imminent loss of legal status, and as a result, are already 5 being forced to make the impossible choice whether to return to a country in crisis, remain in the 6 United States without lawful immigration status, or uproot themselves again to try to find refuge
7 in some third country. For most, this is hardly a choice at all. Venezuelan and Haitian TPS holders 8 cannot safely return to their countries of origin.<sup>197</sup>

9 171. Moreover, due to the lack of diplomatic relations between the United States and 10 Venezuela, Venezuelan TPS holders without valid passports lack the requisite documentation to 11 travel voluntarily to Venezuela or a third country.<sup>198</sup>

12 172. The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration has a flight ban to Haiti, and numerous 13 airlines have indefinitely suspended flights to Haiti, in light of security risks from armed gangs 14 and planes being hit by gunfire while attempting to land.<sup>199</sup>

15 173. Without TPS, many Venezuelans and Haitians will be at immediate risk of 16 deportation to unsafe countries. Venezuela has experienced an exodus of one-fourth of its 17 population in the past decade. Thousands of refugees have also fled Haiti, as it suffers from

1 political chaos, severe gang violence, systemic human rights violations, and widespread 2 deprivation of basic healthcare, clean drinking water, and food supplies.

3 174. Some Venezuelan and Haitian TPS holders may currently be seeking other legal 4 avenues to remain in this country (such as asylum or adjustment of status). However, due to the 5 yearslong asylum backlog, affirmative asylum applications remain long-pending, and do not 6 guarantee an individual protection from either detention or deportation in the interim. Defendants' 7 actions also threaten detention and deportation for TPS holders who do not presently have 8 alternative paths to legal status, even though TPS was established expressly to serve this 9 population—individuals who cannot safely return but may not fit the specific legal requirements 10 of asylum. The loss of TPS in some instances also limits the possibility of acquiring a permanent 11 legal status for which an individual would otherwise be eligible, but for which present legal status 12 is a prerequisite.<sup>200</sup> TPS holders who lose their status may also face a years-long statutory bar to 13 re-entry whether they depart on their own or are deported.<sup>201</sup>

14 175. Venezuelan and Haitian TPS holders also face the prospect of losing employment 15 authorization. This may result in their summary dismissal from their place of work, jeopardizing 16 their and their families' financial stability. Without stable employment, some TPS holders risk 17 losing their homes or other material assets, leading to further economic harm. Many Venezuelan 18 and Haitian TPS holders also face the imminent loss of their drivers' licenses and, with them, their 19 mobility and freedom of movement, because in many states drivers' licenses are limited to those 20 with legal status.<sup>202</sup> Moreover, because the Secretary's termination decision goes into effect so 21 quickly, Venezuelan TPS holders have been afforded almost no time to make alternative

3 Other Harms to TPS Holders: Family Separation, Psychological Harm, and Stigma

4 176. The loss of legal status renders TPS holders vulnerable to separation from U.S.
5 citizen children and other loved ones. There are many Venezuelan and Haitian TPS holders in 6 mixed-status families—with children, spouses, partners, elderly parents, and other family 7 members who are U.S. citizens or Green Card holders. These TPS holders face the risk of being 8 forced to leave their family members behind, or bringing their U.S. citizen children (or other 9 family members) to a country in economic and political ruin, where severe repression is pervasive.

10 177. Venezuelan and Haitian TPS holders have been experiencing tremendous emotional 11 and psychological harm since the challenged decisions. This has resulted in heightened anxiety, 12 trauma, insomnia, and depression, in some cases severe enough to result in acts of self-harm. The 13 psychological harms resulting from Defendants' actions will only increase as the effective date 14 approaches.

15 178. Venezuelan and Haitian TPS holders have also suffered the additional constitutional 16 harm of being subject to an administrative action motivated by racial, ethnic, or national-origin 17 discrimination. Many describe the emotional pain of being subjected to racist attacks by high-18 ranking U.S. government officials. Some also live in fear of leaving the house, speaking their 19 native language, or disclosing their nationality due to the racist targeting of Venezuelans, Haitians, 20 and other non-white migrants.

21 Harm to Plaintiffs

22 179. Plaintiff National TPS Alliance has over 130,000 Venezuelan and Haitian TPS
23 holder members. These members are anxious and desperate. Many are making plans to sell homes 24 and cars, end leases, and collect their belongings in preparation to leave the country, if needed.
25 But they do not believe they can safely return to Venezuela or Haiti because they remain 26 politically unstable, unsafe, and repressive, and because the economies of these countries are in 27 total collapse. If the United States will not allow them to stay, they do not know where they will 28 go or what they will do. Among them:

1                   a)       NTPSA member A.V. has TPS under Venezuela's 2023 designation. He lives in 2 Alabama and works full-time on the night shift at an auto parts manufacturer. As the 2024 3 presidential election drew near, A.V. began struggling with severe anxiety and fears that he would 4 lose his TPS status. News reports about President Trump's plans to deport all immigrants 5 awakened a deep sense of dread in him, as he is terrified to return to Venezuela. As a result of 6 Defendants' actions, in April 2025 he faces the loss of his job, driver's license, and legal right to 7 remain in the United States. His uncle, uncle's wife, and their three-year old son all rely on TPS.
8 Another cousin relies on TPS, and lives with her two U.S. citizen children.

9                   b)       NTPSA member M.R. has TPS under Venezuela's 2021 designation. She lives in 10 West Virginia and works two jobs—full-time in the health care sector and part-time at 11 McDonald's. She is the sole provider for her two minor children and elderly mother. As a result of 12 Defendants' actions, in September 2025 M.R. faces the loss of her legal status, work 13 authorization, and driver's license, as well as health care for her chronically ill daughter and 14 mother. Her twelve-year-old daughter and elderly mother also rely on TPS for their legal status; 15 her five-year-old daughter is a U.S. citizen and faces the prospect of being separated from her 16 family if their TPS is terminated.

17                   c)       NTPSA member Laura Guerrero has TPS under Venezuela's 2021 designation.
18 She has been waiting over nine years with a pending asylum application. She fears being in 19 limbo—with limited access to employment, without legal status, and at risk of deportation—if her 20 TPS is terminated. Her elder daughter, a TPS holder, is currently in her first year as an 21 undergraduate at a prestigious music school, but stands to lose the full scholarship that TPS 22 affords her. Laura has suffered panic attacks since the vacatur announcement.

23                   d)       NTPSA member C.D., a 60-year-old father of three, holds TPS under Venezuela's 24 2021 designation. He lives in Houston, Texas with his wife, where they own their home. They 25 have consistently paid their taxes. C.D. works for a temporary staffing agency and was recently 26 diagnosed with prostate cancer. If, due to Defendants' actions, he loses his TPS in September 27 2025, he will lose his job and be unable to pay for his mortgage and health care, which would be 28 economically devastating for him and his wife. Losing TPS would also expose C.D. to the risk of

1 being deported from the United States, which would inflict many harms, including preventing him 2 from accessing the medical care he needs to treat his cancer.

3 e) NTPSA member Stanley Louis holds TPS under Haiti's 2023 designation. Stanley
4 became an orphan at the age of seven. He is now 40 years old and lives in Seattle, Washington 5 where he studies International Business and Trade at a local college. Stanley applied to extend his 6 TPS pursuant to the July 2024 extension and received TPS related documentation confirming his 7 legal status and work authorization through February 3, 2026. However, the partial vacatur 8 purports to move up the expiration date for his work authorization and lawful status to August 3, 9 2025. Stanley recently interviewed for a security position at the airport but can no longer accept 10 the job because it requires employment authorization valid for at least six months, which Stanley 11 can no longer show. Stanley is afraid that Secretary Noem will terminate TPS for Haiti, as she did 12 with Venezuela, regardless of conditions in Haiti that make it impossible for Stanley to safely 13 return. TPS is Stanley's only source of work authorization and protection against deportation.

14 f) D.F. is 28 years old, a member of NTPSA, and lives in the Northeast. Born in Haiti, 15 she has resided in the United States since the age of nine and has had TPS since 2010. Her mother, 16 father, sister, and several other relatives also rely on TPS. She has one younger brother who is a 17 U.S. citizen. D.F. holds a Bachelor's degree in health science and a Master's degree in healthcare 18 administration. She worked full time to put herself through undergraduate and graduate school, 19 and now works as a program manager for a mobile healthcare unit, providing medical and dental 20 care to underserved populations in the state she now calls home. TPS is what has allowed D.F. to 21 work, obtain an advanced degree, and pursue a meaningful and impactful career in community 22 healthcare. She has no other form of protection or relief from deportation. If she loses her TPS 23 status, D.F.'s career will be irreparably harmed as she will be unable to continue working. She will 24 be left without a means to support herself, and many of her family members will be in similarly 25 desperate circumstances. At the same time, D.F. feels it is impossible for her to return to Haiti, 26 where the current government, unable to protect the people who live there, is obviously incapable 27 of safely receiving the hundreds of thousands of Haitians who have been residing in the United 28 States under TPS.

1                   g)    J.P.L. is a 24-year-old Haitian TPS holder and NTPSA member who resides in 2 Florida. She speaks four languages, is employed as a paralegal, and hopes to someday become an 3 attorney. TPS is her only protection from deportation. She has several family members in the 4 United States, including her grandparents who are U.S. citizens. Her husband is also a TPS holder.
5 If TPS for Haiti is terminated in August, J.P.L. will no longer be able to work to support herself in 6 the United States and will be left with no legal status. However, J.P.L. cannot safely return to 7 Haiti. There, she experienced violence and threats and the police refused to protect her. Since the 8 decision to shorten the timeframe of TPS for Haiti was announced, J.P.L. has been experiencing 9 constant fear and anxiety, making it hard to focus on her work, education, and even her personal 10 well-being.

11                   h)    B.P. is a Haitian TPS holder and member of the NTPSA. He has lived in the 12 Northeast since 2021 with his family. He sought asylum at the border with his wife and son and 13 has a pending asylum application with USCIS. B.P. and his wife received TPS in 2023 and 14 extended their TPS in 2024. Their son is enrolled in elementary school, where he has quickly 15 learned English and made friends. Their family welcomed a daughter in 2023. Now 15 months 16 old, B.P.’s daughter is a U.S. citizen. B.P. was working at a gas station until he became sick. He is 17 currently receiving medical treatment for a neurological issue—treatment he believes would be 18 impossible to access in Haiti. His wife is a home health aide, providing vital care to seniors. If 19 B.P. and his wife lose their TPS, they would be vulnerable to detention and deportation 20 proceedings, risking family separation. B.P. and his wife cannot go back to Haiti, a country their 21 children do not know and where they believe their lives would be in danger. B.P. struggles to 22 sleep at night thinking about what his family will do if they lose TPS.

23                   i)    Esther (a pseudonym) is a Haitian TPS holder and member of the NTPSA. She was 24 lawfully admitted to the U.S. on a tourist visa with her family before the COVID-19 pandemic.
25 Shortly after arriving, Esther’s young brother got very sick and was diagnosed with multiple 26 sclerosis, a chronic disease that can be debilitating, especially without treatment, which he would 27 not be able to receive in Haiti. Then the pandemic unfolded, and travel became impossible.
28 Esther’s brother relies on TPS to qualify for his health insurance, which covers his chronic care,

1 helping him manage his symptoms enough to graduate high school this year. Esther's mother 2 relies on her work authorization to support the family. Esther also relies on her work authorization
3 to support herself and save to go back to school. After taking English classes and other general 4 education requirements, Esther was accepted into a nursing program last fall. She accepted the 5 offer based on her eighteen-month TPS extension, assured she would be able to complete at least 6 the first year of the program under her current TPS status. Now she faces the uncertainty that she 7 could lose her TPS after just one semester, putting into jeopardy all of her hard work.

8       180. Plaintiff Mariela González, a long-time educator, has lived in the United States for 9 fourteen years and is currently employed by an urban school district. She faces termination of her 10 legal status and work authorization in September 2025 as a result of Defendants' actions. She 11 lacks a valid passport and could not legally travel even if she could safely return to Venezuela, 12 which she cannot. Moreover, all of Mariela's immediate family—her parents, siblings, and 13 nephews—reside in the United States and have permanent status.

14       181. Plaintiff Freddy Jose Arape Rivas fled Venezuela due to worsening conditions, 15 including rising repression and violence against opposition members, and a collapsing economy 16 where it became impossible to obtain basic necessities. He works in the IT sector in Texas. He 17 will lose his legal status, employment authorization, and driver's license in April 2025 as a result 18 of Defendants' actions. He also fears he will lose the possibility of an H-1B visa, for which he has 19 a pending application through his employer, because he has been told he will no longer be eligible 20 without lawful status.

21       182. Plaintiff M.H. lives in Tennessee, graduated from a Venezuelan university with a 22 nursing degree, and is currently the primary caregiver for her two children—the elder a TPS
23 holder, and the younger a U.S. citizen with severe asthma. M.H.'s husband works full-time for a 24 government subcontractor. M.H.'s two-year-old son faces an uncertain fate should TPS be 25 terminated—unable to live safely in Venezuela, particularly with a serious and chronic health 26 condition, but facing the possibility of being separated from his mother and sister following the 27 termination of their TPS in April 2025 as a result of Defendants' actions. M.H. has a mandatory 28 check-in with ICE in May 2025, the month after she is scheduled to lose her TPS.

1           183. Plaintiff Cecilia González Herrera came to the United States in 2017, at the age of 2 18, and has lived her entire adult life in this country. She was a student activist in Venezuela, and 3 now attends university and works as a voting rights advocate in Florida. Her mental health has 4 suffered as a result of Defendants' actions, and she faces the loss of the ability to pay in-state
5 tuition for university, which TPS affords her. She has also abandoned the prospect of postgraduate
6 education as a result of the uncertainty created by the termination announcement. And because of 7 Defendants' repeated statements targeting Venezuelans as "dirtbags" and gang members, she feels 8 unwanted in a country that has been her home for eight years.

9           184. Plaintiff Alba Cecilia Purica Hernandez is a childcare provider in San Leandro, 10 California. Her deportation proceedings were terminated on account of her TPS registration.
11 However, she risks losing her legal status and employment authorization in April 2025 as a result 12 of Defendants' actions. She cannot safely return to Venezuela. Nor can she practically return as 13 she lacks a valid Venezuelan passport. Alba has felt sad, scared and adrift since the announcement 14 of the termination of TPS for Venezuela, and feels that the decision is reflective of a perception at 15 the highest levels of the U.S. government that Venezuelans and non-white migrants are less than 16 human.

18 the night shift in a makeup packaging factory to be able to take her daughter to and from school.
19 E.R. has legal status and employment authorization only through TPS and risks losing her 20 employment on April 2, 2025 as a result of Defendants' actions. She is the sole provider for her 21 twelve-year-old daughter, who also has TPS. As a result of an accident which required her to get 22 twenty staples in her head, E.R. requires medical care which she would not be able to get in 23 Venezuela. She and her daughter have a mandatory check-in with ICE in June 2025, two months 24 after they are scheduled to lose their TPS status.

25           186. Plaintiff Hendrina Vivas Castillo is a mother and former business owner who 26 works as a delivery driver in Los Angeles, California. In Venezuela, the economic crisis forced 27 her to shut down her business and she faced mounting political repression, including the arrest of 28 her business's co-owner. As a result of Defendants' actions, she risks losing her TPS and

1 employment authorization in April 2025. Hendrina is terrified of going back to Venezuela and 2 does not know what she will do if her TPS is terminated.

3       187. Plaintiff A.C.A. is a Haitian TPS holder in Florida who has lived in the United 4 States for fifteen years, including as a high school student and during his entire adult life. A.C.A.
5 has many family members in the United States. His mother and two brothers are all U.S. citizens 6 or lawful permanent residents. His U.S. citizen brother filed a visa petition for A.C.A., but due to 7 the backlog, it will be many years before he is eligible to apply for a green card. A.C.A. works in 8 healthcare administration and relies on TPS for his work authorization as well as his legal status.
9 He is currently in college studying accounting at a public university and also relies on TPS for in-10 state tuition, covered by a full scholarship. Florida Governor Ron DeSantis recently signed a law 11 prohibiting undocumented students from paying in-state tuition at Florida colleges and 12 universities. As a result, higher education would be prohibitively expensive for A.C.A. if he were 13 to lose his TPS status because of Defendants' actions. A.C.A. is afraid to return to Haiti due to the 14 violence and instability which has not abated in the fifteen years since he left. Since the decision 15 to shorten the timeframe for TPS for Haiti was announced, he has been experiencing severe 16 anxiety and nightmares about being deported.

17       188. Plaintiff Sherika Blanc lives in Kentucky. She has four U.S. citizen children and is 18 married to a U.S. citizen. Sherika also has other family in the United States, including her parents, 19 who have TPS, and a brother who has applied for a green card. She is now 34 years old, and has 20 not returned to Haiti since she was eight. Sherika has had TPS or DACA since 2010. Her TPS 21 status provided her with the opportunity to work, buy a car, rent a house, and raise a family in the 22 United States. She is a certified nursing assistant and works as a medical coordinator. She also 23 owns her own nail salon. Sherika is a primary financial supporter for her daughters and depends 24 on TPS for her work authorization, in addition to her legal status. Without TPS, Sherika would not 25 be able to provide for her four U.S. citizen children. If she is unable to remain in the United States, 26 Sherika would be forced to choose between leaving her U.S. citizen children and husband behind 27 and returning to Haiti alone, or bringing her family to Haiti to live under the constant threat of 28

1 deadly gang violence while facing conditions of crippling poverty and food and housing 2 insecurity. Sherika was a plaintiff in Ramos v. Nielsen.

3 189. Plaintiff Viles Dorsainvil is a resident of Springfield, Ohio since 2021 and a TPS
4 holder from Haiti. He is the director and co-founder of the Haitian Community Help & Support 5 Center, a nonprofit founded to assist the Haitian immigrant community in Springfield. Viles holds 6 a Master of Divinity degree from The United Theological College of the West Indies in Jamaica
7 and served as the Executive Director of the Haitian Association of the United Nations for seven 8 years. Viles is deeply committed to advancing the well-being of immigrants and refugees, 9 particularly the Haitian community in Clark County, Ohio. In 2024, when, as candidates, Vice 10 President J.D. Vance and President Trump began spreading false accusations about the Haitian 11 immigrant community in Springfield, Viles saw and felt the harm, fear, and threats of violence 12 that followed. He felt compelled to speak out and publicly denounced the hate and racism that 13 Trump and his supporters aimed at Haitian immigrants. Viles, like many of the community 14 members served by the Haitian Community Help & Support Center, relies on TPS for work 15 authorization and protection from deportation. If TPS for Haiti is terminated, Viles will lose the 16 ability to work and live in the United States. However, he fears returning to Haiti, where 17 widespread violence makes it impossible to live and work safely.

18 190. Plaintiff G.S. is a Haitian-trained medical doctor who works as a housing case 19 manager for the State of Massachusetts, providing essential housing assistance to low-income 20 residents of the state. If TPS for Haiti expires in August, G.S. will lose his protection from 21 deportation and only form of legal status in the United States. However, he fears returning to 22 Haiti, having left his country due to widespread gang violence. The uncertainty of his TPS status 23 has left G.S. feeling hopeless and drained of motivation.

24 Harm to Communities and the Public

25 191. TPS holders are an integral part of the economic and social fabric of U.S.
26 communities, and they give back to the country in countless ways. Venezuelan and Haitian TPS 27 holders are health care providers, factory workers, engineers, agricultural workers, childcare 28 providers, educators, and students. They are active in civic life and volunteer at schools,

1 neighborhood and work organizations, and religious institutions. They pay federal, state, and local 2 taxes, and support government social welfare programs. Summarily withdrawing hundreds of 3 thousands of people from the workforce will strain the social safety net and have economic 4 repercussions on citizen and noncitizen communities alike.

5 192. Recognizing the diverse public benefits of designating countries for TPS when they 6 are in the midst of crisis, the mayors of 33 cities urged Secretary Mayorkas in 2023 to extend TPS
7 for Venezuela and other countries. Among the public benefits these local leaders emphasized were 8 adding eligible workers to the workforce, taking pressure off the social safety net by allowing 9 beneficiaries to secure work and be self-sufficient, and helping to clear the asylum backlog.<sup>203</sup>

10 193. In this litigation, 17 states and the District of Columbia (“the Amici States”)— 11 collectively home to at least 99,900 Venezuelan immigrants—filed an amicus brief in support of 12 postponing the effective date of the Venezuela vacatur pending adjudication of Plaintiffs’ 13 claims.<sup>204</sup> The Amici States explain that the public interest favors postponement because 14 Defendants’ actions would inflict massive harm.<sup>205</sup> First, the unlawful vacatur would separate 15 families, “devastate children,” and “fracture Amici States’ communities and schools.”<sup>206</sup> The 16 Amici States note that, as of 2022, “approximately 54,000 U.S. citizen children and 80,000 U.S.
17 citizen adults [throughout the United States] lived with a Venezuelan TPS holder.”<sup>207</sup> Thus, over 18 “130,000 U.S. citizens lived in ‘mixed status’ households with [Venezuelan] individuals whom 19 DHS seeks to unlawfully strip of their legal status—and this figure does not account for the 20 hundreds of thousands of Venezuelans who were newly eligible under the 2023 designation.”<sup>208</sup> 21 Deportations of TPS members would directly tear apart families, schools, and communities while 22 burdening U.S. citizen children with “financial instability, housing and food insecurity, and 1 disruptions in their education.”<sup>209</sup> Meanwhile, the fear of deportation inflicts severe psychological 2 harm on TPS holders and their loved ones. Such fear can cause members of affected 3 communities—“including those born in the United States”—to refrain from important activities 4 such as driving, attending religious services, participating in afterschool activities, and seeking 5 medical care.<sup>210</sup>

6 194. Second, the Amici States emphasize that the unlawful Venezuela vacatur would 7 deplete their economies and workforces.<sup>211</sup> They estimate that “[t]he annual economic 8 contribution of TPS-eligible Venezuelans is $11.5 billion.”<sup>212</sup> Moreover, they note that “TPS 9 holders from all countries [including Venezuela, Haiti, and other nations] paid $3.1 billion in 10 federal taxes, contributing to programs like Social Security and Medicare, and paid $2.1 billion in 11 state and local taxes.”<sup>213</sup> Unlawfully eliminating TPS designations threatens these valuable 12 contributions.

13 195. Third, the Amici States stress how Defendants’ actions would compromise public 14 health and increase health care costs.<sup>214</sup> They explain that eliminating hundreds of thousands of 15 TPS holders’ work authorizations “would deprive many of those individuals and their families of 16 their employer-sponsored health insurance,” thus increasing the number of people on public health 17 insurance and “increasing public expenditures on emergency care provided to uninsured 18 patients.”<sup>215</sup> Moreover, the aforementioned fear of deportation would harm public health by 19 discouraging former TPS holders from seeking treatment or preventative care (including

196. Fourth, the Amici States highlight how Defendants' unlawful actions and the resulting fear of deportation would inflict yet another harm: undermining law enforcement.<sup>217</sup> “Fear of removal, or of having a family or community member removed, makes victims and witnesses reluctant to come forward, to testify in court, and even to seek safety in a domestic violence shelter.”<sup>218</sup> The Amici States point out that “[w]hen law enforcement is unable to obtain evidence of crimes and maintain witness cooperation at trial, public safety suffers.”<sup>219</sup>

197. TPS for Venezuela and Haiti is serving the exact purpose intended by Congress—providing nationality-based humanitarian immigration relief due to the severe instability of these countries, regardless of whether individuals meet the narrow eligibility requirements for other forms of humanitarian protection, such as asylum.<sup>220</sup>

CLAIMS FOR RELIEF

Violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (Venezuela Vacatur)

(Plaintiff NTPSA and Individual Venezuelan Plaintiffs Against All Defendants)

198. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate by reference each and every allegation contained in the preceding paragraphs.

199. The Administrative Procedure Act<sup>221</sup> ensures that federal agencies are accountable to the public by providing a “right of review” to any “person suffering legal wrong because of agency action, or adversely affected or aggrieved by agency action.”<sup>222</sup> Judicial review is generally limited to “final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court.”<sup>223</sup>

1       200. The APA empowers the federal courts to “hold unlawful and set aside agency 2 action, findings, and conclusions” that are “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or 3 otherwise not in accordance with law,” “in excess of statutory jurisdiction, authority, or 4 limitations,” or “without observance of procedure required by law.”<sup>224</sup> The right of review under 5 the APA includes a right to judicial review of “legal question[s] of statutory authority,”<sup>225</sup> and 6 review of “executive agency action for procedural correctness.”<sup>226</sup> To engage in procedurally 7 appropriate decision-making, an agency must ordinarily “display awareness that it is changing 8 position.”<sup>227</sup> Agencies “may not . . . depart from a prior policy sub silentio or simply disregard 9 rules that are still on the books.”<sup>228</sup> And the APA requires a “more detailed justification . . . for 10 disregarding facts and circumstances that underlay . . . the prior policy.”<sup>229</sup>

11       201. Defendants’ February 3, 2025 vacatur of the TPS extension for Venezuela 12 constitutes “final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court,” pursuant 13 to 5 U.S.C. 704, because the Defendants’ vacatur has resulted in all of the individual Venezuelan 14 Plaintiffs and tens of thousands of members of Plaintiff NTPSA losing TPS protection until 15 October 2026, which had been granted to them pursuant to the January 17, 2025 extension, 16 “automatically and without further notice or right of appeal.”<sup>230</sup>

17       202. Defendants’ vacatur of the TPS extension decision made on January 17, 2025 18 exceeded their statutory authority and was arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, pretextual, 19 and deviated from past practice, including because, among other things:

20       a)      The TPS statute carefully regulates the length of TPS extensions, the conditions 21 under which TPS may be terminated, and the timetable for doing so. Defendants had no authority 22 to annul a TPS extension under the timetable and procedures they utilized here.

b) Defendants objected to the January 2025 extension for allowing 2021 TPS holders to re-register under the 2023 extension, but failed to consider that 2021 TPS holders were necessarily eligible for TPS under the 2023 designation as well.<sup>231</sup>

c) Defendants' decision rested on a misinterpretation of the TPS statute's flexible registration requirements and failed to "consider the alternatives that are within the ambit of the existing policy" before vacating the January 17, 2025 extension in its entirety.<sup>232</sup>

d) The decision assumed that TPS designations, including the 2023 Venezuela Designation, are themselves illegal.

- e) The decision assumed that TPS holders are present in the United States illegally.

f) The decision presupposed that prior TPS designations or extensions can be rescinded merely because of policy disagreements between administrations.

g) The decision occurred under circumstances and a timeline that reflect that it was pretextual.<sup>233</sup>

h) To the extent Defendants engaged in any process, it was so deficient as to amount to no process at all, defeating the purpose of the TPS statute and deviating from past practice and rules regarding the applicable process.

203. Venezuelan Plaintiffs (including Venezuelan NTPSA members) will suffer irreparable injury from the unlawful vacatur.

<sup>231</sup> See San Luis Obispo Mothers for Peace v. U.S. Nuclear Regul. Comm'n, 100 F.4th 1039, 1055–56 (9th Cir. 2024) (“An agency action is arbitrary and capricious if . . . the agency has . . . entirely failed to consider an important aspect of the problem.”) (citation omitted).

SECOND CLAIM

Violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (Venezuela Termination)

(Plaintiff NTPSA and Individual Venezuelan Plaintiffs Against All Defendants)

204. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate by reference each and every allegation contained in the preceding paragraphs.

205. The order terminating the 2023 TPS designation for Venezuela constitutes “final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court” under 5 U.S.C. 704 because it will result in TPS holders’ loss of TPS “automatically and without further notice or right of appeal.”<sup>234</sup>

206. Defendants' termination of the 2023 Venezuela Designation exceeded their statutory authority and was arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, pretextual, and deviated from past practice, including because:

a) The decision assumed that TPS designations, including the 2023 Venezuela Designation, are illegal.

b) The decision assumed that TPS holders are present in the United States illegally.

c) The decision relied entirely on a determination that an extension of TPS would be “contrary to the national interest,” but that factor is only relevant at the time of designation; it is not a valid consideration when assessing whether to extend or instead terminate TPS.

d) The research, consultation, and review process leading up to the decision deviated dramatically from past practice without explanation.

e) The decision occurred under circumstances and a timeline that reflect that it was pretextual.<sup>235</sup>

f) To the extent Defendants engaged in any process, it was so deficient as to amount to no process at all, defeating the purpose of the TPS statute.

234 8 C.F.R. 244.19.

207. Venezuelan Plaintiffs (including Venezuelan NTPSA members) will suffer irreparable injury from the unlawful termination.

THIRD CLAIM

Violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (Haiti Partial Vacatur)

(Plaintiff NTPSA and Individual Haitian Plaintiffs Against All Defendants)

208. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate by reference each and every allegation contained in the preceding paragraphs.

209. Defendants’ February 24, 2025 partial vacatur of the TPS extension and redesignation for Haiti constitutes “final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court,” pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 704, because the Defendants’ partial vacatur has cut short the TPS protection that had been granted to all of the individual Haitian Plaintiffs and Haitian TPS holder members of Plaintiff NTPSA pursuant to the July 1, 2024 extension and redesignation, “automatically and without further notice or right of appeal.”<sup>236</sup>

210. Defendants' partial vacatur of the TPS extension and redesignation published in the July 1, 2024 notice exceeded their statutory authority and was arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, pretextual, and deviated from past practice, including because:

a) Defendants had no authority to annul a TPS extension and redesignation under the timetable and procedures they utilized here.

b) The decision assumed that TPS designations, including the 2024 Haiti redesignation, are themselves illegal.

c) The decision assumed that TPS holders are present in the United States illegally.

d) The decision presupposed that prior TPS designations or extensions can be rescinded merely because of policy disagreements between administrations.

e) The decision assumed prior TPS designations or extensions can be rescinded merely because a new administration deemed prior Federal Register notices insufficiently detailed.

f) The decision assumed that the Secretary has an obligation to explain specifically why the particular length of any TPS extension was chosen.

g) The decision rests on the erroneous legal conclusion that six months is the “default” period for TPS extensions, such that any deviation from it requires separate justification.

h) The decision rests on the erroneous legal conclusion that Secretary Mayorkas was required to consider whether extending Haiti's TPS designation was contrary to the national interest of the United States, when that factor is relevant only to a new designation, not to an extension.

- i) The decision assumed that the Secretary has an obligation to specifically explain why a designation is not contrary to the national interest.

j) The decision occurred under circumstances and a timeline that reflect that it was pretextual.<sup>237</sup>

k) To the extent there is any authority to vacate a TPS extension, and to the extent Defendants engaged in any process for review of the prior TPS extension for Haiti, that process was so deficient as to amount to no process at all, defeating the purpose of the TPS statute and deviating from past practice and rules regarding the applicable process.

211. Haitian Plaintiffs (including Haitian NTPSA members) will suffer irreparable injury from the unlawful partial vacatur.

FOURTH CLAIM

Violation of the Equal Protection Guarantee of the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment (All Plaintiffs Against All Defendants)

212. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate by reference each and every allegation contained in the preceding paragraphs.

213. The Fifth Amendment contains an implicit guarantee of equal protection that invalidates any official action that in part reflects a racially discriminatory intent or purpose.

1 Classifications based on race, ethnicity, or national origin receive exacting scrutiny, and even 2 facially neutral policies and practices will be held unconstitutional when they reflect a pattern 3 unexplainable on grounds other than race.<sup>238</sup>

4 214. Defendants' decisions to vacate the January 2025 TPS extension for Venezuela, 5 terminate the 2023 Venezuela Designation, and partially vacate the July 2024 TPS extension and 6 redesignation for Haiti are unconstitutional because they were motivated, at least in part, by 7 intentional discrimination based on race, ethnicity, or national origin.

8 215. Plaintiffs (including Venezuelan and Haitian NTPSA members) will suffer 9 irreparable injury resulting from the illegal vacatur and termination of the 2023 Venezuela 10 Designation and the illegal partial vacatur of the 2024 Haiti extension and redesignation.

11 PRAYER FOR RELIEF

12 Plaintiffs ask this Court to grant the following relief:

13 1. Declare that Defendants' vacatur of the January 17, 2025 TPS extension for 14 Venezuela, purported termination of TPS for Venezuela on February 5, 2025, and partial vacatur 15 of Haiti's July 1, 2024 TPS extension and redesignation were unlawful under the APA and 16 unconstitutional under the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment;

17 2. Declare that Defendants have no authority to vacate a TPS extension under 8 U.S.C.
18 1254a;

19 3. Declare that the January 17, 2025 TPS extension for Venezuela and the July 1, 2024 20 TPS extension and redesignation for Haiti remain in effect under the terms specified in those 21 decisions, 90 Fed. Reg. 5961-01 and 89 Fed. Reg. 54484-01;

22 4. "Set aside" Defendants' vacatur order of February 3, 2025, termination order of 23 February 5, 2025, and partial vacatur order of February 24, 2025 as beyond Defendants' authority 24 and/or unlawful under the APA;

28

5. Postpone or stay the vacatur order of February 3, 2025, termination order of February 5, 2025, and partial vacatur order of February 24, 2025 from taking effect or being put into effect;

6. Enjoin and restrain all Defendants, and their officers, agents, servants, employees, attorneys, and all other persons who are in active concert or participation with any of them from enforcing the vacatur order of February 3, 2025, termination order of February 5, 2025, and partial vacatur order of February 24, 2025;

7. Order Defendants to take all steps necessary to ensure that Venezuela's January 17, 2025 TPS extension and Haiti's July 1, 2024 TPS extension and redesignation remain in full force and effect;

8. Grant an award of attorneys' fees and costs; and

9. Grant any other and further relief that this Court may deem fit and proper.

1 INTRODUCTION

2 1. This lawsuit presents a challenge to Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) 3 Secretary Kristi Noem’s decision to deprive 600,000 Venezuelans protected by Temporary 4 Protected Status (“TPS”) of the right to live and work legally in the United States for the 18-5 month period lawfully authorized by her predecessor. Secretary Noem took two illegal actions 6 within one week of assuming her role at the head of DHS. Three days after her confirmation, she 7 “vacated” an extension of TPS protections for Venezuelans residing in the United States, just 8 weeks after the extension was duly published in the Federal Register. Two days later, she 9 terminated TPS for the Venezuelans who initially registered in 2023. These actions have the effect 10 of robbing 600,000 Venezuelan TPS holders of the right to live and work in this country for the 11 next 18 months. Approximately 350,000 Venezuelan TPS holders stand to lose this humanitarian 12 legal status on April 7, 2025, and their work authorization as soon as April 2, 2025. Secretary 13 Noem announced the vacatur decision in an exclusive interview she gave to Fox News, saying that 14 “the American people . . . want these dirtbags out of the country.”

15 2. Plaintiffs in this case are the National TPS Alliance (“NTPSA”), a member-led 16 organization representing TPS holders across the country, and individuals from Venezuela who 17 have TPS (“Individual Plaintiffs”). These individuals cannot return safely to their country of 18 origin. TPS allows them to live and work lawfully in the United States. They represent the diverse 19 population of Venezuelans who have relied on TPS to provide them the most basic forms of 20 human security—a stable place to live and a chance to work for a living during this time of severe 21 crisis in Venezuela. They are educators, laborers, caretakers, and advocates; parents, students, and 22 children. They live all across the country, with homes, families, jobs, and deep community ties. If 23 Secretary Noem’s TPS termination goes into effect, they will be subject to deportation yet unable 24 to return safely to their home country; and without legal authorization to live or work in the 25 United States.

26 3. The Secretary’s actions are illegal for multiple reasons. At the outset, DHS has no 27 authority to “vacate” a prior TPS extension. The TPS statute tightly regulates the conditions under 28 which TPS decisions can be made, setting time periods and other procedural rules that must be

1 followed for both extensions and terminations. The agency does not have implicit authority to 2 accomplish the same objectives on whatever timeframe it wants, and without following the 3 requisite procedures.

4 4. Even if DHS did have such authority, the reasons provided by the Secretary to 5 vacate the extension are arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, pretextual, and inexplicably 6 deviate from past practice in violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”). Contrary to 7 the claims made in the Federal Register, there was nothing unusual about the timing of the now-8 vacated extension. Nor did it suffer from any of the other purported defects on which Secretary 9 Noem relied to justify her decision—defects which, in any event, should have been resolved by 10 alternatives short of vacatur.

11 5. Even if DHS’s vacatur order were somehow valid, the termination decision that 12 followed suffers from additional defects. Among other things, DHS’s decision to terminate TPS 13 for Venezuelans rests on the assumption that TPS is itself illegal, and that Venezuelans with TPS 14 in the United States are here illegally. This error is evident on the face of the decision. It is also 15 evident from statements made by Secretary Noem. Before she assumed leadership of DHS, she—16 along with President Trump, Vice President J.D. Vance, and high-level Trump advisors—made 17 plain their position that TPS was “illegal,” that persons protected by TPS are here “illegally,” and 18 that this justified their plan to terminate TPS. But neither their disdain for TPS nor the Secretary’s 19 decision can nullify a statute.

20 6. The Secretary’s decisions also were motivated at least in part by racial animus, in 21 contravention of the Fifth Amendment. That is clear from statements the Secretary made when 22 announcing the decisions themselves, labeling Venezuelan TPS holders as “dirtbags”—an 23 expression of racism made by the official decisionmaker as part of her explanation for the 24 decision. Making matters worse, that statement is just one among a torrent of similar racist 25 statements that Secretary Noem, President Trump, and members of the Trump campaign and 26 administration have made to attack and marginalize nonwhite immigrants generally, and the 27 Venezuelan TPS community in particular.

7. For each of these reasons, this Court should set aside the agency's unlawful vacatur and termination orders, and reinstate the prior extension.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

8. This Court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. 1331 because this action arises under the Constitution and laws of the United States. This Court has additional remedial authority under the Declaratory Judgment Act, see 28 U.S.C. 2201 et seq., and the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. 701–706. Article III and the Fifth Amendment independently grant this Court subject matter jurisdiction over Plaintiffs’ Fifth Amendment claim.

9. The federal government has waived its sovereign immunity and permitted judicial review of agency action under 5 U.S.C. 702. See Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) v. United States, 870 F.2d 518, 525 (9th Cir. 1989). In addition, sovereign immunity does not bar claims against federal officials seeking to prevent violations of federal law (rather than monetary relief). See, e.g., Larson v. Domestic & Foreign Com. Corp., 337 U.S. 682, 697–99 & nn.18–19 (1949); Shields v. Utah Idaho Cent. R.R. Co., 305 U.S. 177, 183–84 (1938).

10. Venue is proper in the Northern District of California under 28 U.S.C. 1331(e)(1) because at least one Plaintiff resides in this judicial district and each Defendant is an agency of the United States or an officer of the United States sued in his or her official capacity.

INTRADISTRICT ASSIGNMENT

11. Assignment is proper in the San Francisco division because the claims of Plaintiffs that reside in this judicial district arise in Alameda and San Mateo Counties. Civil Local Rule 3-2(d) and 3-5(b).

Plaintiffs

12. Plaintiff National TPS Alliance (NTPSA) is a member-led organization whose mission is to defend the TPS program and win a path to permanent residency for TPS holders. NTPSA is fiscally sponsored by the Central American Resource Center - CARECEN - of California, a non-profit organization headquartered in Los Angeles, California, which has worked for more than four decades to provide immigrant integration programs, deliver immigration legal

1 services, and foster civic participation and community engagement on immigration policy,
2 education reform, and workers' rights.

3 13. NTPSA advocates to defend TPS and win a path to permanent status for TPS
4 holders; organizes actions to raise public awareness about TPS and the contributions TPS holders
5 make to this country; facilitates community and civic engagement by TPS holders; and provides 6 access to timely and accurate TPS-related information and services to its members. Membership in 7 the NTPSA is free and voluntary. Individuals can become NTPSA members either by joining a
8 local NTPSA committee or by submitting an individual membership application. NTPSA's
9 members set the organization's priorities, lead and participate in NTPSA's local committees and 10 working groups, and select and serve on NTPSA's Executive Committee.

11 14. NTPSA brings this action on behalf of its members. The vast majority of NTPSA's
12 members are TPS holders, including TPS holders from Afghanistan, Burma (Myanmar), 13 Cameroon, El Salvador, Haiti, Honduras, Lebanon, Nepal, Nicaragua, Sudan, Ukraine, Venezuela, 14 and Yemen; the rest are family members of TPS holders and other individuals who wish to 15 support the TPS community. The NTPSA has over 84,000 Venezuelan TPS holder members 16 living in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. They face irreparable harm from the 17 challenged vacatur and termination.

18 15. Plaintiff Mariela González is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2021
19 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur, is at risk of losing her TPS and work
20 authorization on September 10, 2025. She is a resident of San Mateo County, California, and has 21 lived in the United States for the past fourteen years. Mariela works as an instructional coach with 22 an urban school district. Her mother, father, brother, sister, and nephews all live in the United 23 States and are U.S. citizens. She is an NTPSA member.

24 16. Plaintiff Freddy Jose Arape Rivas is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023
25 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing his TPS
26 on April 7, 2025. He applied to renew his TPS and work authorization on January 17, 2025,
27 pursuant to the now-vacated extension of TPS for Venezuelans. USCIS already automatically 28 extended his employment authorization for up to 540 days in response to his application. But the

1 new Federal Register Notice vacating the January 17 extension provides that “USCIS will 2 invalidate EADs” and TPS-related documentation issued pursuant to the January extension. Thus 3 Freddy’s work authorization is at risk of expiring on April 2, 2025. Freddy lives in Collin County, 4 Texas, and works for a technology company. He has family in Texas, including a cousin who,
5 along with his wife and seven-year-old daughter, also have TPS. He is an NTPSA member.

6 17. Plaintiff M.H. is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023 designation and, as a
7 result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing her TPS status on April 7, 8 2025. Her work authorization expires on April 2, 2025. She lives in a Tennessee suburb with her
9 husband and two children. Her seven-year-old daughter also has TPS. Her husband, an engineer, is 10 a U.S. citizen employed by a government subcontractor, and together they have a two-year-old
11 U.S. citizen son. M.H. is a full-time caregiver for her two young children. Her driver’s license
12 expires when her TPS does, and she depends on it for her daily needs. She is an NTPSA member.

13 18. Plaintiff Cecilia Daniela González Herrera is a Venezuelan who has TPS under 14 the 2021 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur, is at risk of losing her TPS on 15 September 10, 2025. She lives with her parents and younger brother in Kissimmee, Florida, and is 16 a derivative applicant on her parents’ long-pending asylum application. She is a student at the 17 University of Central Florida and expects to graduate with a bachelor’s degree in May. She is also 18 employed as the Voting Rights Advocacy Coordinator for Latino Justice PRLDEF. She is an 19 NTPSA member.

20 19. Plaintiff Alba Cecilia Purica Hernández is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 21 2023 designation and, as a result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing her
22 work authorization on April 2, 2025 and TPS on April 7, 2025. She had been a university student 23 in Venezuela. She lives in San Leandro, California and works as a childcare provider. She is an 24 NTPSA member.

25 20. Plaintiff E.R. is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023 designation and is at 26 risk of losing her TPS on April 7, 2025 and her work authorization on April 2, 2025. She is a 27 single parent to a twelve-year-old daughter, who is also a TPS holder. She lives in New York, 28

1 where she works in a factory. She relies on TPS for her work authorization and legal status. She is 2 an NTPSA member.

3       21. Plaintiff Hendrina Vivas Castillo is a Venezuelan who has TPS under the 2023
4 designation, and, as a result of the challenged vacatur and termination, is at risk of losing her TPS
5 on April 7, 2025. Her work permit expires on April 2, 2025. She lives in Culver City, California
6 and works as a delivery driver. She is an NTPSA member.

7 | Defendants

8        22.    Defendant Kristi Noem, sued in her official capacity, is the Secretary of Homeland
9 Security. As the highest-ranking officer for DHS, Defendant Noem has ultimate statutory 10 authority over all TPS extension, termination, and designation decisions. See 8 U.S.C. 1254a(b); 6 11 U.S.C. 557 (transferring functions from the Attorney General).

12        23. Defendant U.S. Department of Homeland Security is a cabinet-level department 13 of the Executive Branch of the federal government and is an “agency” within the meaning of 5 14 U.S.C. 551(1). DHS includes various component agencies, including the U.S. Citizenship and 15 Immigration Services (“USCIS”). DHS, together with all of its component agencies, is responsible 16 for administering and enforcing the TPS program.

17        24. Defendant United States of America includes all other government agencies and 18 departments responsible for the implementation, administration, and change in policy concerning 19 the TPS program.

STATUTORY FRAMEWORK

21       25. Congress established the Temporary Protected Status program in the Immigration 22       Act of 1990.<sup>1</sup> TPS is a form of humanitarian relief, providing lawful immigration status to eligible 23       foreign nationals who cannot safely return home to war-torn or disaster-stricken countries. By

1 enacting the TPS statute, which is codified at 8 U.S.C. 1254a, Congress established formal criteria 2 for relief and set forth predictable procedures.<sup>2</sup>

3 26. Under the TPS statute, the Secretary of Homeland Security<sup>3</sup> makes a “designation”
4 decision for a given country.<sup>4</sup> After consulting with “appropriate” government agencies, the 5 Secretary may designate a foreign state, or any part of that state, for TPS based on: (A) an 6 “ongoing armed conflict within the state” that would “pose a serious threat” to the “personal 7 safety” of the foreign nationals of that state; (B) an “earthquake, flood, drought, epidemic, or other
8 environmental disaster in the state resulting in a substantial, but temporary, disruption of living 9 conditions,” which makes the foreign state “unable, temporarily, to handle adequately the return to 10 the state” of its nationals, and where the foreign state has “officially” requested a designation; or 11 (C) the existence of “extraordinary and temporary conditions in the foreign state” that prevent 12 foreign nationals from safely returning, and where the temporary presence of those foreign 13 nationals in the United States is not “contrary to the national interest of the United States.”<sup>5</sup>

16 mechanisms to allow individuals to remain in the United States for humanitarian reasons. See 17 Adam B. Cox & Cristina Rodríguez, The President and Immigration Law, 119 Yale L.J. 458, 18 501–02 (2009) (discussing use of the “parole power,” which is currently codified at 8 U.S.C.
19 1182(d)(5)); Lynda J. Oswald, Extended Voluntary Departure: Limiting the Attorney General’s Discretion in Immigration Matters, 85 Mich. L. Rev. 152 (1986) (discussing use of “Extended Voluntary Departure”). Presidents have continued to employ such programs even after the creation of TPS. For example, President Trump exercised his discretion to designate Venezuela for “Deferred Enforced Departure” in 2020. Somewhat like TPS, deferred enforced departure allows foreign nationals to remain and work in the United States lawfully while conditions in their homeland are unsafe or return is impracticable.

21 <sup>3</sup> References to the Attorney General in provisions describing functions transferred from the 22 Department of Justice to the Department of Homeland Security “shall be deemed to refer to the 23 Secretary” of Homeland Security. See 6 U.S.C. 557.

24 <sup>4</sup> The agency has long recognized authority to designate a country more than once, which is called 25 “redesignation.” See Extension of Designation and Redesignation of Liberia Under Temporary Protected Status Program, 62 Fed. Reg. 16608-01 (April 7, 1997) (concluding that the TPS statute “explicitly contemplates more than one designation” for one country” because 8 U.S.C.
1254a(c)(1)(A)(i) refers to “the most recent designation of the state”). A TPS designation for a country that is already designated for TPS is called a “redesignation.” When DHS redesignates a country for TPS, it generally has the effect of expanding the pool of potential beneficiaries to include individuals who came to the United States after the country was first designated for TPS.

28 <sup>5</sup> 8 U.S.C. 1254a(b)(1).

1       27. An initial designation period for a given country lasts for six, twelve, or eighteen
2 months, at the Secretary’s discretion.<sup>6</sup> Before the designation can become effective, the Secretary
3 must publish a notice in the Federal Register that includes, among other things, a statement of 4 findings, the effective date of the designation, and a tally of eligible foreign nationals. Once the 5 designation is ordered, it “shall remain in effect” for a period “of not less than 6 months,” and 6 remains operative until terminated under procedures specified in the statute.

7       28. Once the Secretary has designated a particular country for TPS, individuals from 8 that country (or persons without nationality who last habitually resided in that country) may apply
9 for immigration status under the program. To be eligible for TPS, however, individuals from a 10 designated country must meet stringent requirements. These requirements include, among other 11 things, continuous physical presence in the United States from the most recent date of designation;
12 continuous residence in the United States from a (potentially earlier) date designated by the 13 Secretary; satisfaction of the criteria for admissibility as an immigrant; lack of disqualifying 14 criminal history (where more than one misdemeanor or a single felony is disqualifying); and 15 submission of an application, extensive documentation, and fees.<sup>7</sup>

16       29. Congress ensured that individuals who are ultimately granted protected status could 17 enjoy the freedom to live and work in the United States without fear of deportation. Under the 18 statute’s clear directives, an individual who receives and maintains TPS “shall [be] authorize[d]” 19 to engage in employment in the United States; “shall not be detained” by the Secretary of 20 Homeland Security on the basis of immigration status; and “shall not [be] remove[d]” from the 21 United States by the Department of Homeland Security.<sup>8</sup>

22       30. The TPS statute requires the Secretary to periodically re-evaluate country
23 designations. At least 60 days before a particular designation expires, the Secretary must “review 24 the conditions in the foreign state . . . for which a designation is in effect” and determine whether

1 the country still meets the conditions for TPS.<sup>9</sup> The review requires “consultation with appropriate 2 agencies of the Government” and, ultimately, publication of notice in the Federal Register.<sup>10</sup>

3 31. The review and consultation process typically begins months before the 60-day
4 deadline. First,

5 RAIO [the Refugee, Asylum and International Operations Directorate]
6 (a division within USCIS) provides a Country Conditions Memo. In 7 addition, OP&S [Office of Policy and Strategy] (another division within 8 USCIS) drafts a Decision Memo that contains USCIS’s
9 recommendation on what to do about the TPS designation. Once the 10 Decision Memo is finalized, the USCIS Director passes it on to the DHS
Secretary. The State Department provides further input (e.g., country conditions, recommendations). At times, input can also come from other government sources, but the above is the information consistently
provided to the DHS Secretary.<sup>11</sup>

11 32. The Secretary must terminate TPS only if the designated country “no longer 12 continues to meet the conditions of designation.”<sup>12</sup> The statute does not permit consideration of 13 other grounds for termination. The effective date of any TPS termination must be at least 60 days 14 after publication of an official notice of termination, and may not precede the expiry of “the most 15 recent previous extension.”<sup>13</sup> In other words, the statute does not permit the Secretary to cut short
17 transition.”<sup>14</sup>

18 33. If the Secretary does not terminate TPS for a particular country, either because she 19 affirmatively finds that the country continues to meet the conditions for designation or because she 20 simply fails to make a decision, then the designation “is extended” for a period of six months, or 21 by discretion of the Secretary, for a period of twelve or eighteen months.<sup>15</sup>

3 remains valid.<sup>16</sup>

7           Venezuelan TPS Designations

8           35. Venezuelans living in the United States first received temporary protection from 9 removal on January 19, 2021, when President Trump—on the last day of his first 10 Administration—directed the Secretaries of State and Homeland Security to “take appropriate 11 measures to defer for 18 months the removal of any national of Venezuela . . . who is present in 12 the United States as of January 20, 2021,” with limited exceptions, and “to take appropriate 13 measures to authorize employment for aliens whose removal has been deferred, as provided by 14 this memorandum, for the duration of such deferral.” Memorandum re Deferred Enforced 15 Departure for Certain Venezuelans, 86 Fed. Reg. 6845 (Jan. 19, 2021).

17 declared:

18           [T]he Maduro regime is responsible for the worst humanitarian crisis in 19 the Western Hemisphere in recent memory. A catastrophic economic 20 crisis and shortages of basic goods and medicine have forced about five 21 million Venezuelans to flee the country, often under dangerous
22 conditions. . . . The deteriorative condition within Venezuela, which 23 presents an ongoing national security threat to the safety and well-being 24 of the American people, warrants the deferral of the removal of 25 Venezuelan nationals who are present in the United States. Id.

26           37. On March 9, 2021 (under the Biden Administration), DHS designated Venezuela for 27 TPS based on the Secretary’s determination that “extraordinary and temporary conditions in the 28 foreign state prevent [Venezuelans] from returning in safety” and “permitting [Venezuelans] to remain temporarily in the United States” is not “contrary to the national interests of the United

1 States.” 86 Fed. Reg. 13574, 13575 (“2021 Venezuela Designation”). The Secretary found that 2 “Venezuela is currently facing a severe humanitarian emergency” and:

3 [H]as been in the midst of a severe political and economic crisis for 4 several years . . . marked by a wide range of factors including: Economic 5 contraction; inflation and hyperinflation; deepening poverty; high levels 6 of unemployment; reduced access to and shortages of food and 7 medicine; a severely weakened medical system; the reappearance or 8 increased incidence of certain communicable diseases; a collapse in 9 basic services; water, electricity, and fuel shortages; political 10 polarization; institutional and political tensions; human rights abuses 11 and repression; crime and violence; corruption; increased human 12 mobility and displacement (including internal migration, emigration, 13 and return); and the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, among other 14 factors.

15 Id. at 13576.

16 38. Also on March 9, 2021, via the same Federal Register Notice, DHS provided 17 employment authorization for Venezuelans covered by Deferred Enforced Departure. Id. at 13579.

18 39. The 2021 Venezuela Designation allowed eligible Venezuelans who had 19 continuously resided in the U.S. since March 8, 2021 and been physically present in the United 20 States since March 9, 2021 to apply for TPS.

21 40. On July 11, 2022, DHS issued a press release announcing then-Secretary Alejandro 22 Mayorkas’s decision to extend Venezuela’s TPS designation. The press release instructed:

23 Venezuelans who are currently eligible for TPS under the existing 24 designation but may have not yet applied with U.S. Citizenship and 25 Immigration Services (USCIS) should file their applications prior to the September 9, 2022, application deadline, including those Venezuelans
who are covered under the January 2021 grant of Deferred Enforced
Departure (DED). Venezuela’s DED is set to expire July 20, 2022.<sup>17</sup>

26 41. Venezuela’s Deferred Enforced Departure expired on July 20, 2022. Every person
27 who had been eligible for it was by then eligible for TPS, provided they could satisfy the more 28 stringent background check criteria required for TPS.

29 42. On September 8, 2022, DHS extended Venezuela’s TPS designation for 18 months, 30 through March 10, 2024. 87 Fed. Reg. 55024. The Secretary found that extension was warranted

1 due to ongoing “[e]xtraordinary and temporary conditions that prevent Venezuelan nationals from 2 returning in safety includ[ing] severe economic and political crises ongoing within Venezuela, 3 which have an impact across sectors, including limited access to food, basic services, and 4 adequate healthcare, and the deterioration of the rule of law and protection of human rights.” Id. at 5 55026. The Secretary also determined that “it is not contrary to the national interest of the United 6 States to permit Venezuelan TPS beneficiaries to remain in the United States temporarily.” Id. at 7 55027. However, because the decision was only an extension, and not also a re-designation, it did 8 not provide protection to Venezuelans who had arrived in the U.S. after March 9, 2021.

9 43. On October 3, 2023, DHS again extended the 2021 designation of Venezuela for 18
10 months, and also re-designated Venezuela for TPS for 18 months. 88 Fed. Reg. 68130 (“2023 11 Venezuela Designation”). The extension of the 2021 designation ran from March 11, 2024 to 12 September 10, 2025. The new 2023 re-designation ran from October 3, 2023 through April 2, 13 2025. The Secretary again found that

14 [E]xtraordinary and temporary conditions continue to prevent 15 Venezuelan nationals from returning in safety due to a severe 16 humanitarian emergency which has resulted in food insecurity and the 17 inability to access adequate medicine, healthcare, water, electricity, and 18 fuel. Additionally, human rights violations and abuses, high levels of poverty, high levels of crime and violence, and heavy rains and flooding
prevent Venezuelan nationals from returning in safety and permitting
Venezuelan noncitizens to remain in the United States temporarily
would not be contrary to the interests of the United States.

19 Id. at 68134.

20 44. In order to qualify under the 2023 Venezuela Designation, TPS applicants had to 21 prove that they had continuously resided in the United States since July 31, 2023 and had been 22 continuously physically present since October 3, 2023. Id.

23 45. All individuals who were eligible for TPS under the 2021 Designation were also
25 instructions.

26 46. DHS estimated that 243,000 Venezuelan TPS beneficiaries who first registered for 27 TPS under the 2021 Venezuela Designation were eligible to re-register for TPS under its 28 extension. Id.

1       47. In addition, DHS estimated “approximately 472,000 additional individuals may be
2 eligible for TPS under the redesignation of Venezuela. This population includes Venezuelan 3 nationals in the United States in nonimmigrant status or without immigration status.” Id. Such 4 individuals were not eligible under the first designation because they arrived after March 9, 2021.

5 January 2025 TPS Extension for Venezuela

6       48. On January 17, 2025, Secretary Mayorkas extended the 2023 Venezuela Designation 7 by 18 months, through October 2, 2026. 90 Fed. Reg. 5961 (“January 2025 Extension”). The 8 Secretary found that extraordinary and temporary conditions in Venezuela continued to prevent 9 nationals from returning in safety. He explained:

10       Venezuela is experiencing a complex, serious and multidimensional 11 humanitarian crisis. The crisis has reportedly disrupted every aspect of 12 life in Venezuela. Basic services like electricity, internet access, and 13 water are patchy; malnutrition is on the rise; the healthcare system has 14 collapsed; and children receive poor or no education. Inflation rates are 15 also among the highest in the world. Venezuela's complex crisis has pushed Venezuelans into poverty, hunger, poor health, crime,
victory in the July 28, 2024 presidential election—which has been contested as fraudulent by the opposition—has been followed by yet another sweeping crackdown on dissent.

16 Id. at 5963 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted).

17       49. The Secretary also determined that “it is not contrary to the national interest of the 18 United States to permit Venezuelan TPS beneficiaries to remain in the United States temporarily.”
19 Id.

20       50. The extension was effective immediately. The registration period opened that day 21 and extended through September 10, 2025.

22       51. The January 2025 Extension also explained that there would no longer be two 23 separate filing process for TPS designations for Venezuela. Rather:

24       To decrease confusion among stakeholders, ensure optimal operational 25 processes, and maintain the same eligibility requirements, upon 26 publication of this Notice, individuals registered under either the March 27 9, 2021 TPS designation or the October 3, 2023 TPS designation will be allowed to re-register under this extension. This would not, however, require that a beneficiary registered under the March 9, 2021 designation re-register at this time. Rather, it would provide such individuals with the option of doing so. Venezuela TPS beneficiaries who appropriately apply for TPS or re-register under this Notice and are approved by USCIS will obtain TPS through the same extension date of October 2, 2026.

Id. at 5963.

52. The January 2025 Extension also automatically extended relevant employment authorization documents. The notice instructed TPS holders that “if you already have an EAD with a ‘Card Expires’ date of September 10, 2025, April 2, 2025, March 10, 2024, or September 9, 2022, this Federal Register Notice automatically extends it through April 2, 2026 without any further action on your part.” Id. at 5967. It further instructed employers that they “should accept” an expired EAD accompanied by a copy of the January 17, 2025 Federal Register Notice as proof of work authorization through April 2, 2026. Id. at 5969-70.

53. DHS estimated that, as of January 17, 2025, there were 607,000 beneficiaries under the 2021 and 2023 Venezuela Designations combined. Id.

Vacatur of TPS Extension Three Days After Secretary Noem's Confirmation

54. On January 20, 2025, President Trump was sworn in as President of the United States.

55. That same day, President Trump issued an Executive Order titled “Protecting the American People Against Invasion.” The Order mandated that TPS designations be “appropriately limited in scope” in order to ameliorate the “continued presence of illegal aliens in the United States”:

The Secretary of State, the Attorney General, and the Secretary of Homeland Security shall promptly take all appropriate action, consistent with law, to rescind the policy decisions of the previous administration that led to the increased or continued presence of illegal aliens in the United States, and align any and all departmental activities with the policies set out by this order and the immigration laws. Such action should include, but is not limited to . . . ensuring that designations of Temporary Protected Status are consistent with the provisions of section 244 of the INA (8 U.S.C. § 1254a), and that such designations are appropriately limited in scope and made for only so long as may be necessary to fulfill the textual requirements of that statute.<sup>18</sup>

56. On January 25, 2025, Secretary Noem was sworn in as DHS Secretary.

1       57. On January 28, 2025, Secretary Noem vacated the January 2025 Extension for 2 Venezuela, rendering more than 600,000 Venezuelans vulnerable to the loss of legal status and 3 associated benefits in April or September 2025.<sup>19</sup>

4       58. Secretary Noem's decision was the first vacatur of a TPS extension in the 35-year
5 history of the TPS statute.

6       59. On February 3, 2025, DHS formally published a notice in the Federal Register
7 vacating the January 2025 Extension. 90 Fed. Reg. 8805.

8       60. The vacatur asserted that the Secretary has "inherent authority under the INA to 9 reconsider any TPS-related determination, and upon reconsideration, to vacate or amend the 10 determination." Id. at 8806.

11       61. In the vacatur, Secretary Noem did not find any error in Secretary Mayorkas's
12 conclusion that Venezuela continued to meet the conditions for TPS designation. Instead, her sole 13 reason for vacating the extension was her objection to the registration requirement procedures
14 established by Secretary Mayorkas, specifically his decision to permit individuals who initially 15 applied for TPS under the 2021 Venezuela Designation to re-register under the 2023 Designation.

16       62. The vacatur states that it vacates: "(1) [the] extension of the Venezuela 2023 TPS
17 designation, (2) the consolidation of filing processes for both designations, which, in effect 18 resulted in the extension of the 2021 TPS designation, and (3) the EADs that were extended." Id.
19 at 8807.

20       63. The vacatur further rescinds the automatic extension of employment authorization
21 granted by the January 2025 extension; invalidates employment authorization and approval 22 notices already granted; and cancels the ongoing processing of applications already filed. The 23 notice states:

24                   Pursuant to this vacatur, USCIS will no longer accept Venezuela TPS
25 re-registration applications (Form I-821) and associated Applications 26 for Employment Authorization (Form I-765) filed under the [January 2025 Extension]. For TPS beneficiaries who have already filed

1 applications to re-register for TPS pursuant to the [January 2025
2 Extension] and paid any fees associated with their applications, USCIS 3 will cease processing their applications, and issue refunds of any fees 4 paid by those aliens.[FN5] Additionally, USCIS will invalidate EADs; 5 Forms I-797, Notice of Action (Approval Notice); and Forms I-94, 6 Arrival/Departure Record (collectively known as TPS-related 7 documentation) that have been issued with October 2, 2026 expiration 8 dates under the [January 2025 Extension]. USCIS will provide refunds to any fees paid by these aliens as well.

9 Additionally, pursuant to this vacatur the automatic EAD extensions
10 provided in the [January 2025 Extension] are hereby rescinded. USCIS
11 will provide additional guidance regarding the two Venezuela TPS 12 designations on a future date in accordance with applicable laws.

15 Designation, ordering an end to the legal status of approximately 350,000 Venezuelans, effective 16 in April.<sup>20</sup>

17 65. The reasoning in Secretary Noem’s decision would also justify the termination of 18 TPS for the approximately 250,000 people protected by the 2021 Venezuela Designation. Under 19 the statute that decision must be made no later than July 2025.<sup>21</sup>

20 66. On February 5, 2025, DHS published a notice in the Federal Register terminating 21 the 2023 Venezuela Designation. 90 Fed. Reg. 9040.

22 67. The termination notice does not contend that the crisis conditions supporting the 23 2023 Venezuela Designation have ended, finding instead that “the relevant conditions in 24 Venezuela remain both ‘extraordinary’ and ‘temporary.’” Secretary Noem nonetheless 25 “determined that Venezuela no longer continues to meet the conditions for the 2023 designation”
26 because “it is contrary to the national interest to permit the covered Venezuelan nationals to 27 remain temporarily in the United States.” Id. at 9041.

<https://www.uscis.gov/humanitarian/temporary-protected-status/temporary-protected-status-designated-country-venezuela>.

<sup>21</sup> The statute requires a decision at least 60 days prior to the expiry of any particular TPS designation. 8 U.S.C. 1254a(b)(3).

1       68. In her review of whether TPS for Venezuela is in the national interest, Secretary
2 Noem cited President Trump’s directives—his Executive Order, “Protecting the American People
3 Against Invasion,” his “recent, immigration and border-related executive orders and proclamations 4 [which] clearly articulated an array of policy imperatives bearing upon the national interest”; his
6 and American citizens first.” Id. at 9042–43.

7       69. Most TPS holders lack any criminal history. Indeed, individuals are ineligible for 8 TPS if they have more than a single misdemeanor conviction. Yet the termination notice justifies
9 terminating the status of nearly 350,000 Venezuelan TPS holders because alleged members of a 10 Venezuelan gang have been “blamed for sex trafficking, drug smuggling, police shootings, 11 kidnappings, and the exploitation of migrants,” and because President Trump recently placed that 12 gang on a “list of transnational criminal organizations.” In elaborating why extension is not in the 13 national interest, the Notice provides: “TPS has allowed a significant population of inadmissible 14 or illegal aliens without a path to lawful immigration status to settle in the interior of the United 15 States[.] . . . Among these Venezuelan nationals who have crossed into the United States are 16 members of the Venezuelan gang known as Tren de Aragua.” Id.

17       70. Despite that the termination notice issued only two days after the vacatur notice (and 18 less than two weeks after Noem took office), the Notice proclaims that the decision to terminate
19 the 2023 Venezuela Designation followed “consultation with the appropriate U.S. Government 20 agencies,” a review of “country conditions,” and a “consider[ation of] whether permitting 21 Venezuelan nationals covered by the 2023 designation is contrary to the national interest.” Id. at 22 9041.

23       71. The termination takes effect April 7, 2025 or 60 days after the publication of the 24 termination notice. This is the earliest possible date of termination allowed by law; it provides for 25 no orderly transition period.<sup>22</sup> While the termination notice recognizes the discretionary authority

U.S.C. 1254a(d)(3) (Secretary may establish an orderly transition period).

1 of the DHS Secretary to provide for an “orderly transition” period if she determines it to be 2 appropriate,” it rejects one as improper here. The termination notice justifies this in light of the 3 Secretary’s determination that the termination is compelled in the “national interest,” and her 4 finding that there are limited “putative reliance interests.” Id. at 9042–44.

6 2023 Venezuela registrants beyond the date permitted by the original 2023 Designation. Thus,
7 TPS holders protected by the 2023 Venezuela Designation have TPS-related work authorization
8 only until April 2, 2025—five days prior to the expiry of their legal status—even though the 9 statute requires that individuals protected by TPS have “effective” work authorization “throughout 10 the period [they are] in temporary protected status.”<sup>23</sup>

13 Secretary Noem and President Trump Promised to Terminate TPS

14 73. Secretary Noem, President Trump and Vice President J.D. Vance have repeatedly 15 characterized TPS itself as illegal, and committed to terminate TPS long before the Secretary had 16 any opportunity to consider the factors required by the statute. Secretary Noem’s decision to 17 terminate the 2023 Venezuela Designation treats the program itself as illegal.

18 74. DHS never acknowledged or explained the departure from the agency’s prior 19 recognition that Congress lawfully authorized TPS designations, that TPS is itself legal, and that 20 individual TPS designations may be in the national interest.

21 75. Both prior to and since assuming her position running DHS, Secretary Noem has 22 reiterated her view that TPS, as it has been used, is illegal. At her confirmation hearing, Secretary 23 Noem stated that “[TPS] has been abused and manipulated by the Biden Administration, and that

1 will no longer be allowed . . . and these extensions going forward the way that they are. The 2 program was intended to be temporary[.]”<sup>24</sup>

3 76. Secretary Noem defined TPS holders as law violators just by virtue of having this
4 humanitarian status. In announcing her decision to end TPS for Venezuela, Secretary Noem said
5 the termination “stopped” former Secretary Mayorkas from letting Venezuelan TPS holders “stay 6 here and violate our laws for another 18 months.”<sup>25</sup>

7 77. In a February 2, 2025 “Meet the Press” appearance the day the vacatur was 8 published, Secretary Noem said, “The TPP [sic] program has been abused and it doesn’t have 9 integrity right now.”<sup>26</sup>

10 78. President Trump, Vice President Vance, and Trump surrogates have likewise
11 championed the view that TPS designations are “illegal”—or, in the Vice President’s words, “a 12 magic amnesty wand.”<sup>27</sup> They have made clear their intent to target TPS and/or TPS designations 13 for termination.

14 79. President Trump, while campaigning, said that he would personally revoke TPS and 15 that he did not consider it legal. President Trump responded to an interviewer’s question as to 16 whether Haitian TPS holders in Springfield, Ohio were “legal or illegal” and whether he would

1 “revoke TPS status” by saying: “You have to remove the people; you cannot destroy our country

4 employers, and legally authorized to live and work in the United States through the TPS program, 5 President Trump said, “they are illegal immigrants as far as I’m concerned. They’re destroying the 6 towns. . . . [T]hey’ll end up destroying the state!”<sup>29</sup>

8 going to stop doing mass grants of Temporary Protected Status. Of course, you’re going to have 9 people fleeing from tyranny, but that happens on a case-by-case basis, not by waving the magic 10 government wand.”<sup>30</sup> Given that TPS is, by statute, designed to be a mass grant for all eligible 11 individuals (unlike asylum and other forms of fear-based immigration relief), this statement can 12 only be understood as an attack on TPS itself.

13 82. According to the New York Times, Stephen Miller, President Trump’s Deputy Chief 14 of Staff and chief architect of his immigration policy platform, and other top advisers flagged the 15 revocation of TPS as a priority for the incoming administration, again without consideration of

1       83. Project 2025, “the 2025 Presidential Transition Project,” a product of current and 2 former Trump political appointees, also called for the “[r]epeal [of] TPS designations”—without 3 elaboration as to any consideration of country conditions or any other review criteria or 4 processes.<sup>32</sup>

5       84. President Trump’s motivation to terminate TPS is not new. During the first Trump 6 Administration, DHS Secretaries faced unrelenting pressure from the White House to reach its 7 “desired result of terminating TPS” and responded by ordering pre-textual terminations of TPS
8 designations for nearly everyone who held the status. Those termination decisions were ultimately 9 struck down in litigation.<sup>33</sup>

10       85. Secretary Noem’s actions follow this familiar pattern, and show that she was 11 motivated in part in response to a clear mandate from President Trump and other Trump
12 administration immigration officials. This is evident by her reliance on President Trump’s policy 13 objections as the sole support for her determination that termination of TPS for Venezuela was not

4 Secretary Noem's Racist Statements

5 87. In announcing the vacatur in a "Fox and Friends" interview on January 29, 2025, 6 Secretary Noem described Venezuelans in the United States as "dirtbags": "Today we signed an 7 executive order within the Department of Homeland Security and a direction that we were not 8 going to follow through on what he did to tie our hands, that we are going to follow the process, 9 evaluate all of these individuals that are in our country, including the Venezuelans that are here
10 and members of TdA [transnational gang Tren de Aragua]. Listen, . . . the people of this country 11 want these dirtbags out. They want their communities to be safe . . . So, this is part of our plan to 12 make sure we are protecting America and keeping it safe again, just like President Trump 13 promised."<sup>34</sup>

14 88. This was not an isolated occurrence. Secretary Noem has repeatedly described 15 immigrants, and particularly those from Venezuela, as "dirtbags."<sup>35</sup>

17 general people are ineligible for TPS if they have more than a single misdemeanor conviction.
18 Nonetheless, Secretary Noem has also sought to disparage Venezuelan TPS holders as 19 "criminals." At her confirmation hearing, Secretary Noem said: "[T]his extension [of TPS] of over

10 92. On February 2, 2025, the publication date of the Federal Register Notice announcing

15 back into it, and this administration is evaluating all of our programs to make sure they truly are 16 something that is to the benefit of the United States, so that they are not to the benefit of 17 criminals.”<sup>38</sup>

5 94. In a CBS News interview on March 5, 2024, Secretary Noem asserted that the 6 “invasion” by Venezuelan (and Cuban) immigrants constituted an existential threat to the country.
7 “We’ve seen these countries that hate us empty out their prisons, their mental institutions. They’ve

<https://www.politifact.com/factchecks/2024/jun/06/donald-trump/fact-check-trumps-ridiculous-claim-that-millions-0/> (quoting an immigrant behavioral health expert to conclude that President 27 Trump’s assertion that Venezuela was emptying mental health facilities and sending residents to 28 the United States “does not make sense because those numbers are not there”).

1           100. Secretary Noem’s reliance on President Trump’s objectives in justifying the 2 termination of TPS for Venezuela demonstrated her adoption of President Trump’s animus as well 3 as her response to pressure from President Trump and the White House to reach a quick decision 4 to terminate TPS.

5           101. During his prior administration, President Trump repeatedly denigrated immigrants
6 from countries designated for TPS, including Haiti, El Salvador, and Honduras. Most infamously, 7 he referred to countries designated for TPS as “shithole” countries in a conversation with 8 legislators about TPS. He expressed a preference, instead, for immigrants from countries “such as 9 Norway.”<sup>52</sup>

10          102. During his recent campaign, President Trump defended these remarks, reiterating 11 comparisons between “nice countries, you know like Denmark, Switzerland” and “Norway,” and 12 “unbelievable places and countries, countries that are a disaster,” when speaking about 13 immigrants.<sup>53</sup>

14          103. President Trump has sought to dehumanize immigrants, including TPS holders in 15 particular, through other statements. For months, he repeated and amplified the false claim that 16 Haitian TPS holders were “eating the dogs” and “eating the cats,” “eating the pets of the people
17 that live” in Springfield, Ohio.<sup>54</sup>

1           104. President Trump has often compared immigrants to snakes that will bite and kill 2 anyone foolish enough to shelter them.<sup>55</sup> He has also described nonwhite immigrants as 3 “animals.”<sup>56</sup> For example, President Trump said about some undocumented immigrants during a 4 March 2024 rally, “I don’t know if you call them people. In some cases they’re not people, in my 5 opinion, but I’m not allowed to say that[.]”<sup>57</sup>

6           105. President Trump has repeatedly described immigrants in the United States as an 7 “invasion,” repeatedly conflating migrants with “[drug dealers], criminals, gang members and 8 terrorists.”<sup>58</sup>

9           106. President Trump, while campaigning in December 2023, decried nonwhite 10 immigrants for “poisoning the blood of our country.”<sup>59</sup>

2 as “occupied” by criminal migrants—heaping scorn on “savage” Venezuelan gang members in 3 particular. “We’re not going to have a country any longer. That’s who we’re allowing in. The

5 November 5, 2024 . . . will be Liberation Day in America. . . . I will rescue every city and town 6 that has been invaded and conquered.”<sup>60</sup>

7           108. During his first term in office, President Trump also conflated large groups of 8 immigrants, and sometimes even all of them, with members of the MS-13 gang.<sup>61</sup> In his first State 9 of the Union address, he suggested that the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (“DACA”) 10 program, recipients of which are immigrants first brought to the United States as children many 11 years ago, contributed to the spread of MS-13.<sup>62</sup>

12           109. President Trump has also falsely claimed that “jails and mental institutions from 13 other countries and gang members right off the streets of the toughest cities of the world are being 14 brought to the United States of America and emptied out into our country.”<sup>63</sup> There is no basis for 15 this claim.

17 opprobrium. He has contended that Venezuelans have “destroyed the fabric of our country.”<sup>64</sup>

1           111. President Trump has used dehumanizing language and repeatedly called Venezuelan
2 immigrants “animals”: “[E]veryday Americans . . . are living in fear all because [former Vice

6 debates, and interviews found that he called Venezuelan migrants “criminals” at least seventy 7 times between September 1, 2023 to October 2, 2024.<sup>66</sup>

9 emptiness that they’ve ever been” because Venezuela was “taking their people out of those prisons 10 by the thousands” and sending them to the United States.<sup>67</sup>

11           113. President Trump has also made disparaging remarks about Latin American countries 12 and people, frequently relying on crude and derogatory stereotypes to stoke fear about 13 immigration.

14           114. President Trump has also repeatedly “retweeted” avowed white nationalists, such as 15 @WhiteGenocideTM, as well as publicly dined with prominent, self-declared white supremacists, 16 thereby endorsing their racist views and amplifying their racist message.<sup>68</sup>

1           115. The Trump Administration has not shown similar opposition to immigrant
3 Executive Order No. 14204, Addressing Egregious Actions of the Republic of South Africa, which 4 directs Secretary Noem (among others) to:

5           [T]ake appropriate steps, consistent with law, to prioritize humanitarian 6 relief, including admission and resettlement through the United States 7 Refugee Admissions Program, for Afrikaners in South Africa who are 8 victims of unjust racial discrimination.

9           116. Trump's Executive Order to protect white South Africans yet again makes clear that 10 his administration strongly prefers white immigrants over those perceived as non-white.

11           117. Together, all of President Trump's repeated statements denigrating immigrants, and 12 targeting Venezuelans and TPS holders in particular, have not functioned merely as hateful 13 rhetoric. They have also worked as a call to action for those serving him.

14           Statements of Trump Surrogates

15           118. Like President Trump, prominent officials who exerted influence to ensure that 16 DHS's decision-making process on TPS favored termination also harbor racial animus against 17 immigrants perceived as non-white in general and Venezuelans in particular. These officials have 18 been motivated by their racial animosity to intervene in and influence the TPS decision-making 19 process towards termination.

20           119. For example, Stephen Miller, Deputy Chief of Staff to the President, has long 21 expressed support for White Nationalism, "promoted white nationalist literature," and "pushed 22 racist immigration stories" to the media.<sup>69</sup> Miller lauded historical immigration laws that imposed

5       was the senior advisor to the President during Trump’s first term in office, Miller repeatedly called 6       DHS officials to urge termination of TPS.<sup>73</sup>

7       121. Secretary of State Marco Rubio, who was purportedly consulted in Secretary
8       Noem’s review of the Venezuela TPS designations, has demonstrated how Trump surrogates 9       respond to his call to action. In 2022, the Senator Rubio advocated for the extension of TPS for 10       Venezuela, calling it “absolutely essential” to avoid a “very real death sentence for countless 11       Venezuelans who have fled their country.”<sup>74</sup> He even co-sponsored legislation to re-designate TPS

3 The Trump Administration’s Previous Racist Attempts to End TPS

4 122. This is not the first time that an administration guided by President Trump has 5 embarked on an unlawful campaign to destroy TPS in violation of the APA and Equal Protection 6 Clause.

7 123. During President Trump’s first term, every federal district court to consider the 8 question found “evidence that President Trump harbors an animus against non-white, non-9 European aliens which influenced his (and thereby the Secretary’s) decision to end the TPS
10 designation[s]” for El Salvador, Haiti, Sudan, and Nicaragua in 2017 and 2018.<sup>77</sup>

11 124. The evidence adduced in those cases further illustrates that the conduct challenged 12 here is part of a premeditated effort to terminate TPS without regard to applicable law or 13 standards, and to further a racist agenda.<sup>78</sup>

14 125. Political appointees during the first Trump administration also sought to paint TPS 15 holders as criminals and to manufacture evidence to support this impossible claim—to justify the 16 termination of designations, and the undermining of the TPS program. Subordinates of then-DHS 17 Secretary John Kelly covertly sought data on the number of Haitian TPS holders who committed

3 coincides with racial stereotypes – i.e., that non-whites commit crimes and are on the public 4 dole.”<sup>80</sup>

5 126. During President Trump’s first term in office, the pressure from President Trump
6 and the White House into the DHS Secretary’s TPS decision-making was less evident and public
7 than here. The federal district court nonetheless found that “Acting Secretary Duke’s writings
8 suggest that she, in her role at DHS, was largely carrying out or conforming with a predetermined 9 presidential agenda to end TPS.”<sup>81</sup> There, Acting Secretary Duke, in separate personal memos, 10 expressed that her TPS decision-making was based on “an America first view,” a term that 11 invoked then-President Trump’s racist views preferring immigration from majority-white
13 “America First” objectives expressly in the published Federal Register Notice terminating TPS.

14 THE TERMINATION OF TPS STATUS WOULD IMPOSE 15 EXTRAORDINARY AND IRREPARABLE HARM ON TPS HOLDERS, THEIR 16 FAMILIES, AND THEIR COMMUNITIES

17 127. More than 600,000 TPS holders will lose the TPS status they were scheduled to 18 have until October 2026 as a result of Defendants’ vacatur. More than 350,000 of them stand to 19 lose their employment authorization as soon as April 2, 2025 and their legal status on April 7, 20 2025 as a result of the termination of the 2023 Venezuela Designation. The scale of the harm 21 wrought by Defendants’ actions to eliminate TPS protection for Venezuelans will be massive if 22 not reversed.

2                   128. TPS holders are facing the imminent loss of legal status, and as a result, are already 3                   being forced to make the impossible choice whether to return to a country in crisis, remain in the 4                   United States without lawful immigration status, or uproot themselves again to try to find refuge
5                   in some third country. For most, this is not a choice at all. Venezuelan TPS holders cannot safely
6                   return to Venezuela.<sup>83</sup> Moreover, due to the lack of diplomatic relations between the United States
7                   and Venezuela, TPS holders without valid passports lack the requisite documentation to travel 8                   voluntarily to Venezuela or a third country.

9                   129. Without TPS, many Venezuelans will be at immediate risk of deportation to 10                   Venezuela—a country which has experienced an exodus of one-fourth of its population in the past 11                   decade. Some Venezuelan TPS holders may currently be seeking other legal avenues to remain in 12                   this country (such as asylum or adjustment of status). However, due to the yearslong asylum 13                   backlog, affirmative asylum applications remain long-pending, and do not guarantee an individual 14                   protection from either detention or deportation in the interim. Defendants' actions also threaten 15                   detention and deportation for TPS holders who do not presently have alternative paths to legal 16                   status, even though TPS was established expressly to serve this population—individuals who 17                   cannot safely return but may not fit the stringent legal requirements of asylum. The loss of TPS in 18                   some instances also limits the possibility of acquiring a permanent legal status for which an 19                   individual would otherwise be eligible, but for which present legal status is a prerequisite.<sup>84</sup>

20                   130. Venezuelan TPS holders also face the prospect of losing employment authorization.
21                   This may result in their summary dismissal from their place of work, jeopardizing their and their 22                   families' financial stability. Without stable employment, some TPS holders risk losing their homes

1 or other material assets, leading to further economic harm. Many Venezuelan TPS holders also 2 face the imminent loss of their drivers' licenses and, with them, their mobility and freedom of 3 movement, because drivers' licenses are limited to those with legal status in many states.<sup>85</sup> And 4 because the Secretary's termination decision goes into effect so quickly, Venezuelan TPS holders 5 have been afforded almost no time to make alternative arrangements for themselves and their 6 families, including by applying for other forms of immigration relief, employment authorization, 7 or drivers' licenses.

8 Other Harms to TPS Holders: Family Separation, Psychological Harm, and Stigma

9 131. The loss of legal status renders TPS holders vulnerable to separation from U.S.
10 citizen children and other loved ones. There are many Venezuelan TPS holders in mixed-status 11 families—with children, spouses, partners, elderly parents, and other family members who are 12 U.S. citizens or Green Card holders. These TPS holders face the risk of being forced to leave their 13 family members behind, or bringing their U.S. citizen children (or other family members) to a 14 country in economic and political ruin, where severe repression is pervasive.

15 132. Venezuelan TPS holders have been experiencing tremendous emotional and 16 psychological harm since the challenged decisions. This has resulted in heightened anxiety, 17 trauma, insomnia, and depression, in some cases severe enough to result in acts of self-harm. The 18 psychological harms resulting from Defendants' actions will only increase as the effective date 19 approaches.

20 133. Venezuelan TPS holders have also suffered the additional constitutional harm of 21 being subject to an administrative action motivated by racial, ethnic, or national-origin
22 discrimination. Many describe the emotional pain of being subjected to racist attacks by high-23 ranking U.S. government officials. Some also live in fear of leaving the house, speaking Spanish, 24 or disclosing their nationality due to the racist targeting of Venezuelans and other nonwhite 25 migrants.

1 Harm to Plaintiffs

2 134. Plaintiff National TPS Alliance has over 84,000 Venezuelan TPS holder members.
3 These members are anxious and desperate. Many are making plans to sell homes and cars, end 4 leases, and collect their belongings in preparation to leave the country. But they do not believe 5 they can safely return to Venezuela because it remains politically unstable and repressive, and 6 because the economy is in total collapse. If the United States will not allow them to stay, they do 7 not know where they will go or what they will do. Among them:

8 a) NTPSA member A.V. has TPS under Venezuela's 2023 designation. He 9 lives in Alabama and works full-time on the night shift at an auto parts manufacturer. As the 10 2024 presidential election drew near, A.V. began struggling with severe anxiety and fears 11 that he would lose his TPS status. News reports about President Trump's plans to deport all 12 immigrants awakened a deep sense of dread in him, as he is terrified to return to Venezuela.
13 He faces the April 2025 loss of his job, driver's license, and legal right to remain in the 14 United States. His uncle, uncle's wife, and their three-year old son all rely on TPS. Another 15 cousin relies on TPS, and lives with her two U.S. citizen children.

16 b) NTPSA member M.R. has TPS under Venezuela's 2021 designation. She 17 lives in West Virginia and works two jobs—full-time in the health care sector and part-time 18 at McDonalds. She is the sole provider for her two minor children and elderly mother. As a 19 result of Defendants' actions, in September 2025 M.R. faces the loss of her legal status, 20 work authorization, and driver's license, as well as health care for her chronically ill 21 daughter and mother. Her twelve-year-old daughter and elderly mother also rely on TPS for 22 their legal status; her five-year-old daughter is a U.S. citizen and faces the prospect of being 23 separated from her family if their TPS is terminated.

24 c) NTPSA member Laura Guerrero has TPS under Venezuela's 2021 25 designation. She has been waiting over nine years with a pending asylum application. She 26 fears being in limbo—with limited access to employment, without legal status, and at risk of 27 deportation if her TPS is terminated. Her elder daughter, a TPS holder, is currently in her 28 first year as an undergraduate at a prestigious music school but stands to lose the full

1 scholarship that TPS affords her. Laura has suffered panic attacks since the vacatur 2 announcement.

3 d) NTPSA member C.D., a 60-year old father of three, holds TPS under 4 Venezuela's 2021 designation. He lives in Houston, Texas with his wife, where they own 5 their own home. They have consistently paid their taxes. C.D. works for a temporary 6 staffing agency and was recently diagnosed with prostate cancer. If he loses his TPS in 7 September 2025 he would lose his job and be unable to pay for his mortgage and health 8 care, which would be economically devastating for him and his wife. Losing TPS would 9 also expose C.D. to risk of being deported from the United States, which would inflict many 10 harms, including preventing him from accessing the medical care he needs to treat his 11 cancer.

12 135. Plaintiff Mariela González, a long-time educator, has lived in the United States for 13 fourteen years and is currently employed by an urban school district. She faces termination of her 14 legal status and work authorization in September 2025 as a result of Defendants' actions. She 15 lacks a valid passport and could not legally travel even if she could safely return to Venezuela, 16 which she cannot. Moreover, all of Mariela's immediate family—her parents, siblings, and 17 nephews—reside in the United States and have permanent status.

18 136. Plaintiff Freddy Jose Arape Rivas fled Venezuela due to worsening conditions, 19 including rising repression and violence against opposition members, and a collapsing economy
20 where it became impossible to obtain basic necessities. He works in the IT sector in Texas. He 21 will lose his legal status, employment authorization, and driver's license in April 2025 as a result
22 of Defendants' actions. He also fears he will lose the possibility of an H1B visa, for which he has 23 a pending application through his employer, because he has been told he will no longer be eligible 24 without lawful status.

25 137. Plaintiff M.H. lives in Tennessee, graduated from a Venezuelan university with a
26 nursing degree, and is currently the primary caregiver for her two children—the elder a TPS
27 holder, and the younger a U.S. citizen with severe asthma. M.H.'s husband works full-time for a
28 government subcontractor. M.H.'s two-year-old son faces an uncertain fate should TPS be

1 terminated—unable to live safely in Venezuela, particularly with a serious and chronic health 2 condition, but facing the possibility of being separated from his mother and sister following the
3 termination of their TPS in April 2025 as a result of Defendants’ actions. M.H. has a mandatory
4 check-in with ICE in May 2025, the month after she is scheduled to lose her TPS.

5 138. Plaintiff Cecilia González Herrera came to the United States in 2017, at the age of 6 18, and has lived her entire adult life in this country. She was a student activist in Venezuela, and 7 now attends university and works as a voting rights advocate in Florida. Her mental health has 8 suffered as a result of Defendants’ actions, and she faces the loss of the ability to pay in-state
9 tuition for university, which TPS affords her. She has also abandoned the prospect of postgraduate 10 education as a result of the uncertainty created by the termination announcement. And because of 11 Defendants’ repeated statements targeting Venezuelans as “dirtbags” and gang members, she feels 12 unwanted in a country that has been her home for eight years.

13 139. Plaintiff Alba Cecilia Purica Hernandez is a childcare provider in San Leandro, 14 California. Her deportation proceedings were terminated on account of her TPS registration.
15 However, she risks losing her legal status and employment authorization in April 2025 as a result 16 of Defendants’ actions. She cannot safely return to Venezuela. Nor can she practically return as 17 she lacks a valid Venezuelan passport. Alba has felt sad, scared and adrift since the announcement
18 of the termination of TPS for Venezuela, and feels that the decision is reflective of a perception at 19 the highest levels of the U.S. government that Venezuelans and non-white migrants are less than 20 human.

22 the night shift in a makeup packaging factory to be able to take her daughter to and from school.
23 E.R. has legal status and employment authorization only through TPS and risks losing her
24 employment on April 2, 2025 as a result of Defendants’ actions. She is the sole provider for her 25 twelve-year-old daughter, who also has TPS. E.R. also requires medical care which she would not 26 be able to get in Venezuela, as a result an accident in which she suffered an injury which required 27 her to get twenty staples in her head. She and her daughter have a mandatory check-in with ICE in 28 June 2025, two months after they are scheduled to lose their TPS status.

1           141. Plaintiff Hendrina Vivas Castillo is a mother and former business owner who 2 works as a delivery driver in Los Angeles, California. In Venezuela, the economic crisis forced 3 her to shut down her business and she faced mounting political repression, including the arrest of 4 her business's co-owner. She risks losing her TPS and employment authorization in April 2025.
5 Hendrina is terrified of going back to Venezuela and does not know what she will do if her TPS is 6 terminated.

7 Harm to Communities and the Public

8           142. TPS holders are an integral part of the economic and social fabric of U.S.
9 communities, and they give back to the country in countless ways. Venezuelan TPS holders are 10 health care providers, factory workers, engineers, agricultural workers, childcare providers, 11 educators, and students. They are active in civic life and volunteer at schools, neighborhood and 12 work organizations, and religious institutions. They pay federal, state, and local taxes, and support 13 government social welfare programs. Summarily withdrawing hundreds of thousands of people 14 from the workforce will strain the social safety net and have economic repercussions on citizen 15 and noncitizen communities alike.

17 are in the midst of crisis, the mayors of 33 cities urged Secretary Mayorkas in 2023 to extend TPS
18 for Venezuela and other countries. Among the public benefits these local leaders emphasized were 19 adding eligible workers to the workforce, taking pressure off the social safety net by allowing 20 beneficiaries to secure work and be self-sufficient, and helping to clear the asylum backlog.<sup>86</sup>

21           144. TPS for Venezuela is serving the exact purpose intended by Congress—providing 22 nationality-based humanitarian immigration relief due to a country's severe instability, regardless 23 of whether individuals meet the narrow eligibility requirements for other forms of humanitarian 24 protection, such as asylum.<sup>87</sup>

Violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (Vacatur)

(Against All Defendants)

145. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate by reference each and every allegation contained in the preceding paragraphs.

146. The Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. 701 et seq., ensures that federal agencies are accountable to the public by providing a “right of review” to any “person suffering legal wrong because of agency action, or adversely affected or aggrieved by agency action.” 5 U.S.C. 702. Judicial review is generally limited to “final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court.” 5 U.S.C. 704.

147. The APA empowers the federal courts to “hold unlawful and set aside agency actions, findings, and conclusions” that are “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law,” “in excess of statutory jurisdiction, authority, or limitations,” or “without observance of procedure required by law.” 5 U.S.C. 706(2)(A), (C), (D). The right of review under the APA includes a right to judicial review of “legal question[s] of statutory authority,” In re Border Infrastructure Env’t Litig., 915 F.3d 1213, 1222 (9th Cir. 2019), and review of “executive agency action for procedural correctness.” FCC v. Fox Television Stations, Inc., 556 U.S. 502, 513 (2009). To engage in procedurally appropriate decision-making, an agency must ordinarily “display awareness that it is changing position.” Id. at 515. Agencies “may not . . . depart from a prior policy sub silentio or simply disregard rules that are still on the books.” Id. And the APA requires a “more detailed justification . . . for disregarding facts and circumstances that underlay . . . the prior policy.” Id. at 515–16.

148. Defendants' February 3, 2025 vacatur of the TPS extension for Venezuela constitutes "final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court" pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 704, because the Defendants' vacatur has resulted in all of the Individual Plaintiffs and tens of thousands of members of Plaintiff NTPSA losing TPS protection until October 2026.

1 which had been granted to them pursuant to the January 17, 2025 extension, “automatically and 2 without further notice or right of appeal.” 8 C.F.R. 244.19.

3 149. Defendants’ vacatur of the TPS extension decision they had made on January 17, 4 2025 exceeded their statutory authority and was arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, 5 pretextual, and deviated from past practice, including because, among other things:

6 a) The TPS statute carefully regulates the length of TPS extensions, the 7 conditions under which they may be terminated, and the timetable for doing so. Defendants 8 had no authority to annul a TPS extension under the timetable and procedures they utilized 9 here.

10 b) Defendants objected to the January 2025 extension for allowing 2021 TPS 11 holders to re-register under the 2023 extension, but failed to consider that 2021 TPS holders 12 were necessarily eligible for TPS under the 2023 designation as well. See San Luis Obispo
13 Mothers for Peace v. United States Nuclear Regul. Comm’n, 100 F.4th 1039, 1055–56 (9th 14 Cir. 2024) (“An agency action is arbitrary and capricious if . . . the agency has . . . entirely 15 failed to consider an important aspect of the problem.”).

16 c) Defendants’ decision rested on a misinterpretation of the TPS statute’s 17 flexible registration requirements and failed to “consider the alternatives that are within the 18 ambit of the existing policy” before vacating the January 17, 2025 extension in its entirety.
19 DHS v Regents of the Univ. of Cal., 591 U.S. 1, 30 (2020) (cleaned up); see Fed. Election 20 Comm’n v. Akins, 524 U.S. 11, 25 (1998) (“If a reviewing court agrees that the agency 21 misinterpreted the law, it will set aside the agency’s action and remand the case.”).

22 d) The decision assumed that TPS designations, including the 2023 Venezuela 23 Designation, are themselves illegal.

24 e) The decision assumed that TPS holders are present in the United States 25 illegally.

26 f) The decision presupposed that prior TPS designations or extensions can be 27 rescinded merely because of policy disagreements between administrations.

g) The decision occurred under circumstances and a timeline that reflect that it was pretextual. Cf. Dep’t of Com. v. New York, 139 S. Ct. 2551, 2575 (2019) (reversing agency action because stated reason for decision was pretextual).

h) To the extent Defendants engaged in any process, it was so deficient as to amount to no process at all, defeating the purpose of the TPS statute and deviating from past practice and rules regarding the applicable process.

150. Plaintiffs will suffer irreparable injury from the unlawful vacatur.

Violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (Termination) (Against All Defendants)

151. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate by reference each and every allegation contained in the preceding paragraphs.

152. The order terminating the 2023 TPS designation for Venezuela constitutes “final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court” under 5 U.S.C. 704 because it will result in TPS holders’ loss of TPS “automatically and without further notice or right of appeal.” 8 C.F.R. 244.19.

153. Defendants' termination of the 2023 Venezuela Designation exceeded their statutory authority and was arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, pretextual, and deviated from past practice, including because, among other things:

a) The decision assumed that TPS designations, including the 2023 Venezuela Designation, are illegal.

- b) The decision assumed that TPS holders are present in the United States illegally.

c) The research, consultation, and review process leading up to the decision deviated dramatically from past practice without explanation.

d) The decision occurred under circumstances and a timeline that reflect that it was pretextual. Cf. Dep’t of Com., 139 S. Ct. at 2575 (reversing agency action because stated reason for decision was pretextual).

e) To the extent Defendants engaged in any process, it was so deficient as to amount to no process at all, defeating the purpose of the TPS statute.

154. Plaintiffs will suffer irreparable injury from the unlawful termination.

THIRD CLAIM

Violation of the Equal Protection Guarantee of the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment (Against All Defendants by All Plaintiffs)

155. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporate by reference each and every allegation contained in the preceding paragraphs.

156. The Fifth Amendment contains an implicit guarantee of equal protection that invalidates any official action that in part reflects a racially discriminatory intent or purpose. Classifications based on race, ethnicity, or national origin receive exacting scrutiny, and even facially neutral policies and practices will be held unconstitutional when they reflect a pattern unexplainable on grounds other than race. Bolling v. Sharpe, 347 U.S. 497, 499 (1954); Vill. of Arlington Heights v. Metro. Hous. Dev. Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 265–66 (1977).

157. Defendants' decisions to vacate the January TPS extension for Venezuela, and to terminate the 2023 Venezuela Designation, are unconstitutional because they were motivated, at least in part, by intentional discrimination based on race, ethnicity, or national origin.

158. Plaintiffs will suffer irreparable injury resulting from the illegal vacatur and the arbitrary termination of the 2023 Venezuela Designation.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

Plaintiffs ask this Court to grant the following relief:

1. Declare that Defendants' vacatur of the January 17, 2025 TPS extension for Venezuela and Defendants' purported termination of TPS for Venezuela on February 5, 2025 were unlawful under the APA and unconstitutional under the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment and:

2. Declare that Defendants have no authority to vacate a TPS extension under 8 U.S.C. 1254a;

3. Declare that the January 17, 2025 TPS extension for Venezuela remains in effect under the terms specified in that extension, 90 Fed. Reg. 5961;

4. “Set aside” Defendants’ vacatur order of February 3, 2025, and termination order of February 5, 2025, as beyond Defendants’ authority and/or unlawful under the APA;

5. Postpone or stay the vacatur order of February 3, 2025, and termination order of February 5, 2025, from taking effect or being put into effect;

6. Enjoin and restrain all Defendants, and their officers, agents, servants, employees, attorneys, and all other persons who are in active concert or participation with any of them from enforcing the vacatur order of February 3, 2025, and termination order of February 5, 2025;

7. Order Defendants to take all steps necessary to ensure that the extension of TPS issued on January 17, 2025 remains in full force and effect;

8. Grant an award of attorneys' fees and costs; and

9. Grant any other and further relief that this Court may deem fit and proper.
